The city attorney was instructed to collect if possible a check given by Don Knight, a saloohman, as ball for a man arrested for intoxication. The sense of the council was that if Mr. Knight did not pay the check his license should be revoked, FOURTH DISTRICT COURT.

The Riddle case will be argued and submitted today. Yesterday a daugh-ter of Mr. Riddle, Mrs. Nowlin, testi-fied, refreshing her memory from a newsnaper containing an account of district court. The prisoner was not represented by counsel. The evidence the trial, that Mrs. Mary Ann Knell Riddle testified in Beaver in 1887, at a trial for unlawful cohabitation in which ntroduced by the state went to show Isaac Riddle, the defendant in this case, was also defendant that she had been married to him by Justice Allphin "two years ago." This marriage is the one that the defense been trying to establish, the claim being that Mr. Riddle was legally married to Mary Ann Knell before the marriage in 1886, with Mary Caroline the the latter marriage, according to the claims of the defense, being a plural marriage. It is also the marriage about the record of which there has been much controversy since this case was commenced, the plaintiff claiming that Justice Allphin had changed the date mark. He then threatened Ibapah, and attempted to pull a knife when his son grabbed his shooting iron away of the marriage on the record and made it appear that it took place in May, 1885, when in fact it did not take place till after the marriage with the plaintiff in 1886. Mr. Allphin was not the justice of the peace at the time he claims the marriage ceremony was per-formed; but he explains that he performed it as an Elder, and when he became a justice of the peace later on he made an entry of the marriage on his docket in order to preserve a rec of it, as had been requested by Riddle. The defense also depends upon a common law marriage between de-fendant and Mary Ann Knell existing prior to and at the time of his marriage-plural as they claim-with plaintiff in case the formal marriage by Justice Allphin is not sufficiently proven. In the case of J. P. Pones, deceased: Henry Gardner, John Jones and Wm. J. Thomas have been appointed appraisers. DEAL-REDFORD MARRIAGE. A marriage license has been issued to
