THEATRICAL.—There was a very good house, last night, to see Mr. Stark on his first appearance. The gentleman was warmly greeted, and afforded the utmost gratification to all the admirers of the legitimate and classical drama, by his impersonation of Lucius Junius Brutus. He has a fine figure on the stage, a good walk, artistic gestures, and as an elocutionist is entitled to take rank among the highest. Last night his voice seemed to become hoarse after the first act, through which cause he did not appear to so much advantage as he would have done. But his acting was chaste, natural and artistic. No ranting to split the ears; no unseemly or distorted action, which too often wrings applause from the unthinking and provokes disgust in the refined; but voice, and gesture, and facial play went harmoniously with the text. Lucius Junius Brutus is not a fiery, impetuous man; nor does he play the madman in his anger, stirring the hearts of Roman citizens by loud and angry tones instead of calm and moving reason. For years he kept within his own breast the great wrongs which he had to avenge; played the fool, and suffered the jeers and floutings and brutal jests of the haughty Tarquins, while his heart swelled at each fresh indignity; yet the mask fell not. The wisdom and self-control which could thus, through long, suffering years, hide their sorrows and their wrongs, and bury the deep settled purpose of revenge until the time to strike for virtue, liberty and right had come, would not break out in wild rhapsodies, nor fret, rage and storm; but would move with deliberation, act with calm, unmovable determination, and move the judgments of the people by sage reasoning. Such was the Brutus of Mr. Stark last night. The last act was exceedingly fine, and the touching scene between Brutus and Titus—the father and son—the judge and the condemned—was most affecting.

Mr. McKenzie played Titus well, so did Mr. Hardie Collatinus, Miss Adams and Miss Colebrook were very good. Indeed the play was capitally rendered throughout.

Mr. Stark is a great actor, chaste, artistic and finished. He appears to-morrow night as Richelieu, and bears the character of being one of the first Richelieu's of the age, Booth and Forrest not excepted. And we hope that during his very brief engagement, our citizens may embrace the opportunity of seeing really classical acting in the higher range of the drama. "Richelieu" is strongly cast, with Mr. Stark in the title role, and the strength of the company in the play.

The Double-Bedded Room is the farce.

LAST NIGHT.—It was pleasant last night, in the Theatre, to enjoy the comfortable atmosphere in the building, which was well warmed. This is an assurance of comfort on cold nights, that will be a strong inducement for the public to attend. The play, also, presented so many points in unison with our faith and feelings, in its elevated sentiments of virtue, its abhorrence of vice, and its strong advocacy of and prompting to liberty, that it could not fail but stir up the liveliest emotions in all who felt the power and force of its language and situations.

We understand that Mr. Stark suffered from cold, and that he has not played for eighteen months, while he has not sustained the character of Brutus for fifteen years. The hoarseness which was perceptible during parts of the play, will doubtless be removed by a little use and the removal of the cold which affected him.

MUSICIANS who desire to obtain a knowledge of Thorough Base or Harmony, as most of our instrumentalists do, who have not already obtained it, should make the acquaintance of Mrs. White as soon as possible. The quickness with which she imparts a knowledge of the "divine science" by "Robbins American method," is somewhat astonishing. Her success with her pupils is beyond all question. G

WE return our sincere thanks to this People for the liberal Patronage we have received, and in view of the great scarcity of money and the decline in the value of some kinds of Goods east, we have determined to offer our Stock at a heavy Discount for

A Discount of from TEN to TWENTY PER CENT. on all kinds of Dishes, Plates, Cups and Saucers, Glassware, Castors, &c., &c.

ARGUMENT:

THIS we think better for the Customer than Enterprises on the Lottery Plan, these having been tried elsewhere and not found profitable to the investors.

The People know quite well already who sells the Cheapest and Best Goods, and when they get them, knowing them to be cheap, and then get a Discount of from Ten to Twenty per Cent., we think they will come to the conclusion that it is better to have the full benefit of what they spend at once and on the spot, than take ONE Chance in FIFTY of drawing something, some time in the future.

You are not required to purchase "Ten Dollars" worth to entitle you to the Discount, but we will allow it in all cases, whether the purchase be large or small.

This is to give the poor man or poor woman, who cannot get hold of "Ten Dollars," a chance to buy Goods Cheap.
