CHRISTMAS IN THE ARCTIC.

HOW GREELY AND HOW ASSOCIATE PARTIED IT IN 1885.

"I think Christmas, 1885, was my most memorable one," said General Greely, the famous Arctic explorer, in a report of the Buffalo Express. "With my command I was proceeding southward in the hope of obtaining help, when on the 20th of October we encountered a very low, and we were on very short rations, every one being allowed just enough food in each twenty-four hours to sustain life. Under these depressing circumstances and amid the awful silence of the Polar night the cheerfulness that we contrived to maintain was remarkable. As the Christmas season approached we all looked forward to it with eager anticipation, but only as a holiday day when associations and memories would to some extent vary the wearisome monotony of our lives, but because we knew that the winter winter would last about five or six months, and that then the sun would return and the long dreary night be at an end.

"Christmas day came at last. Christmas in the Arctic region! At 10 o'clock we had our breakfast—thin soup made of peas, carrots, blubber and potatoes. Our Christmas dinner was served at 1 o'clock. Harkon four men. First course, a stew of seal meat, adipe, blubber, potatoes and bread crumbs. Second course, served one hour after the first, a stew of radish, blubber and milk. Dessert, a cup of hot chocolate. The best and most Christlike feature of the meal was that we were allowed a sufficient quantity of it to satisfy the pangs of hunger.

"Our enjoyment of the dinner—cup of chocolate—we tried to press as much as possible. Over it we had each other Christmas dinner, we exchanged reminiscences of bygone Christmases at home with the loved ones so far away. We discussed the probability of our ever receiving our own Christmas again, and we entered into an agreement that if we got back we would pass the day together in memory of that awful Christmas we were then spending in the realm of the relentless ice king. Also, many of those brave fellows never lived to see another Christmas.

"Then we had some singing. There were some good singers among us, and of different nationalities, too, so we sang in English, French, Danish and German. And then we recited the only Christmas poem that was recited to us that year. One of our party—Kallgren by name—had some tobacco with him, and, knowing that most of the men were destitute of it, he very kindly made a cigarette for each of our little party. I will wager that in all Christendom that day not a present was given or received that gave such intense delight in the recipient as did these little rolls of tobacco and paper. The men were quite affable and being pulled away at for dear life, and thus my most memorable Christmas was a Christmas over the north pole—ended in smoke."
