MISS EDITH EVANS

Brings Action Against Los Angeles Bank Teller Who Trifled With Her Affections, She Alleges.

"Hand there Oi was, a'wytin' at the choich, a'wytin at the choich. "H'and when Ol found 'c'd left me in the loich, my 'ow it did h'upset me." With feeling may Miss Edith Margaret Evans sing this pathetically funny little English music hall ditty for again has she been given promise of marriage and then left "a'wytin' at the choich."

The first adventure and the one which brought her into public notice, had all Utah talking some few months back. She said Dr. McEnery, widower and husband of the late Mrs. Henrietta Mchusband of the late Mrs. Henrietta Mc-Laughlin-McEnery had betrayed her under promise of marriage. Her story coming to light just as the doctor was endeavoring to become guardian over his step daughter, Isabel McLaughlin and her money, was extremely embar-rassing. The doctor gave the girl $2,500. This was deposited with the Southern Trust company in Los Angeles. W. Curtain Springer, teller of the com-pany's bank, became acquainted with the former English nurse and cashed checks for her. the former English nurse and cashed checks for her. It is Mr. Springer, against whom she is now going to file a suit for breach of promise. She has filed a suit against him, demanding $10,000 dam-ages. This follows a sensation sprung a week ago by Miss Evans who applied for a marriage license explaining to the clerks in Los Angeles that she was to marry Mr. Springer who is ill and could not come to get the license. The papers were issued and Miss Evans left, going to St. Mark's cathedral in Los Angeles, where, according to her story, she was to have met Springer, who wanted the marriage kept quiet. But, says the girl, he failed to mater-ialize. "I went to the bank and he was not there and I have not heard, nor seen anything of him since." At the time the license was issued, newspaper reporters of Los Angeles visited the banker and asked him if he was going to marry Miss Evans and he dailed the the low mare for newspaper reporters of Los Angeles visited the banker and asked him if he was going to marry Miss Evans and he denied that he was the man, if Springer was the name used. It would appear that the girl is pur-suing certain methods for pecuniary purposes but those in Utah who were close to McEnery, will remem-ber how deathly white the doctor went when he saw the English maid entering the railrond coach at Ogden and how he tried to drop out of sight. And, during the entire proceed-ings, in which Miss Evan's threatened suit and the guardianship of Isabel were all mixed up, Dr. McEnery seemed worried excessively by the prosence of the girl. He was the one who proposed compromise and who seemed to be greatly relieved when his suggestion was accepted. Just what remains untold in the dispatches on the coast case cannot be guessed here. There are many who, despite the ap-There are many who, despite the ap-pearance of the thing, will believe the girl is a simple, trusting English girl, an adventuress, nor professional blackmailer.
