EVENING NEWS

October 17, 1877.

MOTHER.

Let thy mother tenderly
Down life's steep decline;
Once her arm was thy support,
Now she leans on thine.
See how her loving face
Shows deep lines of care;
Think it was her toil for thee,
Left that record there.
Ne'er forget her tireless watch,
Kept by day and night,
Taking from her sleep the grace,
From her eyes the light.
Which will her faithful heart,
Which through weary years,
Echoed with its sympathy
All thy smiles and tears.
Thank God for thy mother's love,
Guard the priceless boon;
For the bitter parting hour,
Cometh all too soon.
When thy grateful tenderness
Loses power to save,
Earth will hold no dearer spot
Than thy mother's grave.

PATIENCE.

Were there no night we could not read the stars,
The heavens would turn into a blinding glare;
Freedom is but seen through the prison bars,
And rough sea makes the haven passing fair.
We cannot measure joys but by their loss;
When blessings fade away we see them then;
Our richest clusters grow around the cross,
And in the night-time angels sing to men.
The seed must first be buried deep in earth,
Before the life opens to the sky;
So "light is sown," and gladness hath its birth,
In the dark depths where we can only cry,
"Life out of death" is heaven's unwritten law;
Nay, it is written in a myriad forms;
The victor palm grows on the field of war,
And strength and beauty are the fruits of storms.
Come then, my soul, be brave to do and bear,
Thy life is bruised that it may be more sweet;
The cross will soon be left, the crown we'll wear,
Nay, we will wait it at our Savior's feet.
And up among the glories never told,
Sweeter than music, and more true than gold,
Our hands will strike the vibrant harp of gold,
To the glad song, "He doeth all things well."

Long Walks.

1702.—May 29th, John Morgan, a Welshman, for a wager of 100 guineas, undertook to walk from London to Land's End, in Cornwall, and back again (510 miles), in fourteen days, which he accomplished within nine hours of the time allowed him.

1750.—September 8th, Pearson, a tailor, who was to walk 300 miles in Tenthill Fields, Westminster, in six days, finished his journey half an hour within the time allowed him.

1759.—On February 1st, George Guest, of Birmingham, who had laid a considerable wager that he would walk 1,000 miles in twenty-eight days, finished his journey with great ease. It seemed as if he had laid by for bets, for in the last two days, he had 100 miles to walk, but walked them with so much ease to himself that, to show his agility, he walked the last six miles within an hour, though he had fully six hours to do them in.

1781.—In July a young woman went from Blencog in Scotland, to within two miles of Newcastle, in one day, which is about seventy-two miles.

Robert Batley, of Thetford, in Norfolk, when an old man, frequently walked from Thetford to London (eighty-one miles), in one day, and back the next.

1781.—July 20th, John Baty undertook to walk 700 miles on Richmond course in fourteen days, which he performed with great ease. Mr. Baty was in the fifty-fifth year of his age.

1792.—May, Thomas Sawyer, a laborer in Herefordshire, walked 404 miles in six days, over a very rough and stony road, between Hereford and London, in 1792.

1791.—July, a gentleman, aged seventy-seven, walked from London to Liverpool in four days, which is above fifty miles a day.

TRUE SYMPATHY.—How much can it do to express sympathy than to give sympathy. Their is a half hour sermon on the difference between faith and works in a little incident which is just now doing about the poor soldier was selling pie in the street. A richly uniformed comrade met him, and at once began to express his sorrow at the change of fortune which had befallen him. His eloquence was, however, interrupted by the sudden explosion of this sentence, "My friend, hang your pity; buy a pie." The moral is easy to see and hard to follow. Don't sigh over poverty, but send a pall of gold instead. Roll a pretty speech up in a dollar bill, and the recipient will feel that you have discovered the secret of true eloquence.
