STRANGER THAN FICTION.

OF AN INDIANA FAMILY.

The history of the McDougal family, which came to Indianapolis in its early days, is stranger than fiction, and so full is it of remance and adventure that as a narrative of fact it seems incredi-ble. The McDougals were of Scotch descent and possessed many of the striking characteristics of that nationality. When the family came to Indianapolis it consisted of five brothers, whose remarkable and varied career have long since been forgotten, except by the older inhabitants. They possessed in common the qualities necessary for leadership, and wherever their different lots were cast these qualities asserted themselves and invariably brought them to the front. They were aggressive, courageous and possessed a restless desire for adventure, which led them, after leaving Indianapolis as young men, into widely different paths. The one coming nearest to not having an interesting history is the oldest, who is still living in California at the advanced age of 90. He came to Indianapolis in 1828 and bought a tract of land, on which much of the eastern part of the city now stands. At the time of the gold excitement in California. nia he went to that State, where he has since resided. He has been a member of the Legislature of that State and has made considerable money, but dissipated it as rapidly, and now imagines himself immensely wealthy, while in reality he possesses nothing.

Charles, the second in point of age, assisted by an uncle of the late Governor Hendricks, secured the appointment of assistant surgeon, in 1832, at a trading station. Later he passed examination at St. Louis, and was made assistant surgeon in the regular army, and was stationed at various posts throughout the country. He was atterward promoted to the rank of surgeon, seved through the Seminole war in Florida, the Mexican war, and had charge of the Department of the East during the war of the Rebellion. He was retired on the half pay of an army efficer, and passed his last days about New York and Washington, dying a few years ago.

On his first trip "out" as midshipman he had a difference with a shipmate, and it was agreed that a duel should be fought as soon as they reached the coast of Africa, as they were on their way to that country. The duel was fought and McDougal's antagonist was wounded in the groin. McDougal himself was saved by the bullet striking one of the numerous brass but ons which adorned the midshipman's uniform. As captain, he had charge of a form. As captain, he had charge of a vessel at the bombardment of Vera Cruz during the Mexican war. In about the year 1862, while in the harbor of Yokohama, Japan, the Mikado had issued one of his characteristic manifestoes, ordering all foreign vessels out of Japanese ports. McDougal not seeing fit to obey this order, the Lord High Executioner was sent to see the command enforced. The Americaa vessel was fired upon from the fort, and the strongest and best manned war ship at the command of the Japanese navy was sent to assist in its destruction. McDougal returned the fire with a sixty-four pounder, ressel at the bombardment of Vera on it's as firm as a rock. the ffre with a sixty-four pounder, struck the boiler of the Japanese ship,

In a moment we were surrounded and the major was endeavoring to explain to an exexcited farmer and his grown sons how it was we had killed four of his best cattle within a dozen rods of the house. It took $80 and a great deal of conversation to smooth matters as regarded the cattle, and then the farmer there wasn't but one blanked bear in the whole country, and he was in a cage at Ukiah. He said he wished there were bears around there; wished there were bears around there, which there were some of the old-time grizz-lies; he'd help us find one and then skin up a tree and watch him knock the tar out of the whole blanked party. He added that he didn't care a blank if we had paid for the cattle, we couldn't have a steak, as the major re quested; he wasn't keeping no blanked butcher shop for lunatics, anyhow. It fact he seemed considerably annoyed, and so we returned to camp. A few minutes later a deputy sheriff rode over from an adjoining farm and requested us to move out of the county.
