MISS MARY ASTOR PAUL

DEBUTANTE'S BUTTERFLY BALL.

The coming out of Miss Mary Astor Paul, daughter of James W. Paul, Jr., of Philadelphia, was a social sensation.

Fairlyland was ravished. Myriads of beautiful and gorgeously spotted butterflies, imported from South America, fluttered around the ball room, and fountains of perfumed water sparkled and twinkled in the subdued tint of shifting colored lights and music, soft and sweet, floated through the hall, all tending to delude the imagination and waft one to realms foreign to mortal conception.

Mr. Paul has made Philadelphia sit up and take notice before. On the occasion of the debut of another daughter, Miss Ellen Drexel Paul, now Mrs. Paul Denica Mills, he gave what has gone into the social history of the city as the "Four Seasons" ball. But the "Butterfly ball" affair eclipsed it. Vying with the splendor of the decorations were the gowns of the women guests. Jewels valued at many hundreds of thousands of dollars sparkled from the fair throats and elaborate coiffures. Never has a Philadelphia society function, seen a more elaborate or imposing display of hand-some gowns and jewels or a more animated and brilliant scene than that which prevailed in the hall throughout the evening.

The teachers and members of the Proctor high school formed a skating party and enjoyed a few hours of sport and recreation on Utah lake.
