PISTOL PRACTICE FOR LADIES. TERMS FOR THE SERIEVELAND

UNDER the head of "Scoundrelism" we published in Saturday's issue an ac- thereafter." count of an attempt that had been made late at night to effect an entrance into a house in the 10th Ward. Yesterday mind. evening, under the head of "Burglary, we published a successful attempt of the mane naturein thellth Ward. Three men succeeded in effecting an entrance into a house while the man was absent. His wife was in bed; and she was awakened by one of the rascals presenting a pistol at her head, and threatening to shoot her if she made any noise. They robbed the house of forty-five dollars in greenbacks; but, being interrupted by the warning of one of their confederates outside that somebody was approaching, they dropped fifteen dollars of the amount, and made off. It was only a few weeks ago that we published another account of a most daring burglary in the same part of the town. In that instance the man of the house was at home, and when he awakened from his bers.

From all these accounts we should conclude that these burglars are very daring and cunning, or many of the people are very careless about fastening their houses. There has been a time, extending over many years in this country, when it would not have been thought unsafe for families to go to bed without fastening their doors and windows and in summer time to even them all open. House leave breaking or burglary was never heard of, and the immunity from the depredations of thieves which the people enjoyed in those days induced a habit of carelessness in regard to the proper fastening of their houses. But those halcyon days are past for the present. Civilization has marched westward, and one of the necessities of Cleaver introduced a joint resolution civilized society is to have doors and for the protection of settlers on the

During the dis-cussion Morton delivered a prepared speech, the burden of which was that, according to the atatutes the five-twenties sh uld be paid in currency. Cole took the same view. Fessenden expressed the contrary conviction and advocated the advanced Republican plat-form. Howard agreed with Fessenden form. Howard agreed with Fessenden. Cameron favored the postponement of the bill until after the election. Con-ness thought the Democratic platform should be met now, and the facts in the government vindicated. Underneath the western building is a large cave, in which there is a well, and it is supposed that there has been a subterranean passage from the cave to the castle in former times. In the east ern building there are the remains of what has been a dark chamber with arched roof, accessible by a secret spiral stair. The northern and eastern walls, of this part of the ruins, together with the arched roof, fell on Saturday morning-a result probably due to the severe gales which we have experienced during the past week. Correspondence.

PROVO CITY, July 10, 1868.

Schools in Utah county, fourteen in number, ten of which I have visited and found in a thriving condition. I have received three monthly reports from ten of them, ending June 30th, 1868, which show in the aggregate as follows: Ten schools, ten superintea-dents, twenty assistant superintenden's, Mogens, Sigrid and Charlotte Pedersen; Instructor, and from various other John and Eliza Sköldebrand; Ole, Anne, Church works. From this report it can tion to the increase of pupils, that all may be equally benefitted. We build school houses that intellect may be quickened into activity and enriched with knowledge. The living principle which gave birth to Sabbath Schools, had for its design and object the application to life of the great principles revealed from Heaven for the elevation of the human mind, and the regeneration The age is characterized by mental While the Elders of Israel are sent to foreign lands to enlighten the benightreflected, yet do not feel its importance, it must be because they are blinded and cannot see. If a cause which originated in the spirit of the gospel and which harmonizes with its true spirit in relieving humanity; is not worthy of our attention, what is? For this is the cause of humanity; nor can this cause die; with the blessings of the Almighty it must go on, until it shall have accomplished the desired object. Great is the good which this organibut for life. And in no very distant future will be witnessed the elevation of our youth to greatness and power; for this is attached to the kingdom established by God in the last days. The foundation of this system was laid in our midst by the servants of God. Shall we look upon it as a matter of no importance? It is a system noiseless in its operation, but certain in its results. Yours Truly, . DAVID JOHN. MARK TWAIN ON THE ACCOR-DEON.

windows well secured by good locks and fastenings.

The people in the east part of the city, and, in fact, all over the city, should understand this necessity. In the primitive days of our settlement locks and other fastenings were but little used; but where civilization is in full blast the lives of the people depend to a very great extent on having locks that cannot be picked, and bolts and bars which cannot be wrenched off. No house in this country should be without them; and where locks cannot be obtained, a stout wooden bar, well fastened, will answer a good purpose. Every house should be so secured, before the family retires to rest, that no burglar can effect an entrance without awakening the inmates.

We irecommend also to husbands and fathers that they furnish their expired term. wives and daughters with pistols and ammunition, and let them practice loading and firing them, until they become experts at the business. A very little practice will familiarize them with the use of these weapons, and they may find such familiarity of great service to them at some time in their lives. When females learn to use firearms, their fathers, and husbands will not be uneasy while they are absent about their houses being robbed or their families suffering from the violence of burglars. We know ladles whose friends would have no unessiness about their taking care of themselves in a house, if they had their arms, even if rufflans were to break into it.

As a general thing our ladies have plenty of nerve. The rough scenes through which they passed in the days when they suffered from mobocracy has given it to them. They are not easily terrified, and in times of difficulty and danger evince a calmness and presence of mind that excite admiration. There have been times in our history when they have found a knowbreak into houses, or even try to do so, they will meet with such a reception as will surprise them. If a few of them get shot in their attempts to rob, the remainder will, doubtless, be more careful than they have been. Shooting is excellent medicine for kleptomania.
