

PIONEER BALL
TOMORROW NIGHT
Utah Daughters to Appear in Old-Time Book Muslin Glory.
ONE BIG CRUSH IS PROMISED.

Grand March to be Headed at the Lion House by Church and State Dignitaries.

Tomorrow night the Daughters of the Utah Pioneers will draw out from the lavender-scented bureaux old memories with which to bring to mind the faded glory of book muslin dresses or bereft draperies of artificial flowers and quaint old hoop earrings.

The Lion House will once more be filled with merry throngs, come to pay their respects to a thousand long-forgotten modes of wooing. Terpsichore and the indulgence in innocent gaiety.

Every indication points to there being a great crush at the annual event and already the caller is getting his voice in trim for "balance to your partners; hal'um left; tum-e, tum, tum; doce do—a little more dough—all promenade," and kindred exhortations long since forgotten in the hall of time.

Not the least interesting feature will be the grand march led by the dignitaries of the Church and state who will start from the parlor and make a tour through the halls, ballroom and other chambers of the historic old Lion House.

Then supper will begin—a pioneer repast such as the first settlers used to indulge in before the advent of the French chef in the west. The French circulated the pioneer costumes to be worn by a number of the guests will be both historic and unique. Those not so fortunate as to come from pioneer stock will don their best bib and tucker, evening dress or whatever they feel most at home in, the tout ensemble having a sort of before-and-after effect, costumes ancient and modern, in fact.

TYPICAL OLD TIME BALL.
So that the younger generation may sense just how old time balls were featured in Utah in the early days the following from the pen of a stranger, a "gentle" as he calls himself, is reproduced:

Before our ride with Rockwell, we received notes of invitation to certain festivities in the Mormon academy of music, intended for the commemoration of our national independence. These festivities took the form of a ball, and afforded such an opportunity for studying Mormon sociology as three months solitary stay in Salt Lake might not have given me.

That Fourth of July fell on a Saturday. In their ambition to reproduce ancient Judaism (and this ambition is a key to most of their puzzles) the Mormons are sabbatarians of a strictness which would delight Lord Shaftesbury. Accordingly, in order that their festivities might not encroach on the early hours of Sunday (for Sabbath as it is noticeably called by all sects who have the Jewish idea of the day) they had the ball on the Fourth of July eve instead of the night of the Fourth. I did not realize the risk of such an encroachment when I read the following sentence printed upon my billet of invitation: "Dancing to commence at 4 p. m."

AT THE THEATER.

Our party and a friend whose position as agent of Wells-Fargo ministered unto him an abundant entrance everywhere in Utah, were the only Gentiles whom I found invited by President Young to meet in the neighborhood of 1300 saints. We repaired to the opera house at 8 o'clock, feeling a certain degree of remorse at seeming so "stuck up" as the lateness of our arrival must make us the eyes of the people who had been cutting "pigeon wings" since 4 p. m.

On entering the theater, we were surprised to see how remarkably it had been improved since we stood on the stage in day light, listening to Heber C. Kimball, and seeing the women busy in the preparation of the festive trimmings. Fragrant ropes of evergreen hung in symmetrical festoons from the cornice at the edge of the galleries; others wound spirally about the pillars and wreathed the capitals. A great central chandelier was similarly ornamented, while interspersed among the pine and cedar were immense garlands and bunches of natural flowers, native and exotic, freshly plucked that day.

The lights were so abundant that in the galleries the heat was oppressive, and the whole house was illuminated nearly as well as the accomplished stage by gas. The boundary between stage and parterre having been obliterated by planking over the seats flush with the former, the whole area of both was thrown open to the dancers, making as commodious a ballroom as could be desired by any pleasure seeker in the world. A Mormon band gave vent to the music of the occasion. They played quite as well as the ballroom bands of most eastern towns, no larger than Salt Lake City, if we except those whose population has become somewhat Teutonic, and what they lacked in quality they made up in quantity. We sought out our entertainer, Brigham Young, to thank him for the flattering reception made in our Gentile favor. He was standing in the dress circle of the theater, looking down on the dancers. Like all eastern party-goers,

Any kind of weather "Money-Back" shoes are the right shoes for you to wear. Spring styles are in and waiting your choosing.

he was habited in "customary suit of solemn black," and looked very distinguished in this dress, though his daily homespun detracts nothing from the feeling, when in his presence, that you are beholding a most remarkable man. He is nearly 70 years old, but looks only about 40. His height is about five feet ten. The height of Lord Chesterfield's "gentleman."

AS HE SAW BRIGHAM YOUNG. Brigham's manners astonish any one who knows that his only education was a few quarters of such common school education as could be had in Ontario Co., N. Y., during the early part of the century. There are few courtier men living. His address is a fine combination of dignity with the desire to confer happiness, of perfect deference to the feelings of others with absolute certainty of himself and his opinions.

Brigham began our conversation at the theater by telling me I was late. It was after 9 o'clock. I replied that it was the time we usually set about dressing for an evening party in N. Y. or Boston. The opera house was a subject which Brigham and I could agree upon. I was greatly surprised to find in the desert heart of the continent a place of public amusement which regarding comfort, capacity and beauty, has but two or three superiors in the United States. My great surprise was excited by the remarkable artistic beauty of the gilt and painted decorations of the gilt stage the cornices and the mouldings about the proscenium boxes. President Young, with a proper pride assured me that every particle of the ornamental work was done by indigenous and saintly hands. "But you don't know yet," he added, "how independent we are of you in the east."

"Where do you think we got that central chandelier and what do you suppose we paid for it?" It was a piece of work that would have been creditable to any New York firm, apparently a richly carved circle, entwined with gilt vines, leaves and tendrils blossoming all over with flaming wax lights and suspended with a massive chain of golden lustre. So I replied that he probably paid $100 in New York.

"Capital," exclaimed Brigham. "I made it myself. That circle is a cart-wheel, a wheel of one of our convoluted, I had it washed, and gilded it with my own hands. It hangs by a pair of ox-chains, which I also gilded; and the gilt ornaments being of the best, were all cut out after my patterns, out of sheet tin!" I excused myself from numerous kind invitations to dance, because I wished to make a circuit of the hall room for the purpose of thorough physiognomic study of Utah good society. Patriotic silk and broadcloths were rare exception, but these cordially assented with the great masses of plebeian dress and calico. Few ladies wore jewelry, feathers and artificial flowers; and these adornments seemed to have been drawn from trunks which had crossed the plains and the mountains—the breast pins and earrings being of the red gold and slender workmanship which delighted our revolutionary ancestors: the head-gear of an exuberant—top-heavy bellies with bushel-baskets of finery dumped on their heads and left to stay there higgledy-piggledy, just as a toy watch—by standing still forever, once a day tells the time as truly as the sun. There were some pretty girls swimming about in tasteful whelp-syllabub of tarlatan.

Among the men, I saw some very strong, capable faces, but the majority had not much character in their looks; indeed, in that regard differed little from any average crowd of men anywhere.

ELKS' DANCE TONIGHT.

Salt Lake City lodge 55, B. P. O. E., will give a Washington's birthday party or colonial ball at the club house this word to that effect reaching the local land office yesterday. This means that a large amount of valuable lands will be brought under cultivation, 10 years being allowed under the provisions of the law for the state to reclaim the land.

DEPARTMENT APPROVES

More Than 48,000 Acres of Land in Beaver County to be Reclaimed Under Carey Act.

Beaver county lands, totaling 48,226.74 acres, selected for reclamation under the provisions of the Carey act have been set aside and approved by the interior department at Washington, and word to that effect reaching the local land office yesterday. This means that a large amount of valuable lands will be brought under cultivation, 10 years being allowed under the provisions of the law for the state to reclaim the land.

This is the first tract of land in Utah to be approved by the department selected under the Carey act, although several years ago a filing was made, but was not approved by the government. Gov. Cutler was notified of the action of the department, and the state and commissioners will now proceed to fix the price of the land and arrange other details of settlement.

The land will be reclaimed by means of water furnished by the Beaver Irrigation Land & Power company. This morning Joseph Kimball, president of the company, expressed gratification that the selections had been approved by the government, and said the company expected to commence the work of construction in May, a little time being necessary in which to comply with the requirements of the state in the matter of the settlement terms, etc.

KOORYMAN'S IN TROUBLE AGAIN

This Time It is the Father Once More Who Starts A Row.

BEATS HIS WIFE WITH A CLUB.

Half a Dozen Telephone Messages Send Police on Hot Chase for The Man—No Arrests.

The Kooryman's are in trouble again, and it will be a serious matter for John Kooryman, father of the brood of children who have, with the father's help, kept the police and sheriff's forces in a turmoil for a long time, if the officers can lay hands upon him. Early this morning a telephone message was received at police headquarters to the effect that Kooryman, Sr., was beating his wife to death with a club. The police have been called to the Kooryman home, Tenth East and First South streets, so many times, that they paid little attention to the report. Then came six more messages, in about as many minutes, and Officers Ripley, Price and Moore boarded the patrol wagon and hurried to the Kooryman home. They found that Kooryman had, as reported, been beating his wife with a club. The woman was in bed suffering from many bruises, but the man was nowhere to be found. The officers searched the neighborhood, but were unable to find him. Later it was reported that the man had returned and was hiding in the house, but the police refused to make another trip for him unless someone filed a complaint against Kooryman.

The cause of the trouble could not be learned. The officers were informed that Kooryman and his wife became involved in a row early this morning and the police were called. She ran screaming into the street and the man followed her with a club and gave her a severe beating. The screams of the woman aroused the neighborhood and the police were called. If a complaint is made the man will be placed under arrest as soon as the officers can locate him.

WANTS LAND IN MILLARD.

Judge King Represents Company Asking to Take Up 30,000 Acres.

Judge W. H. King has filed with the state board of land commissioners a communication stating that he is representing the interests of a St. Louis syndicate desirous of taking up, under the Carey act, 30,000 acres of arid land in Millard county, near Layton Junction. Judge King stated the expectation of his clients to expend $300,000 in developing. He was notified to have his filing made according to law, to be taken up in the order of business by the land board.
