DEATH OF RANDALL.

FIVE years of a doubtful tenure of life, during the last two, was precarious, has brought what has been long feared and threatened, the death of Samuel Jackson Randall. He passed away at an early hour yesterday morning, at his home in Washington. His health failed about five years ago, but for three years was not so feeble as to prevent him from attending to his duties as a portion of the time. For two years, however, he has not been able to give much attention to public affairs, though he retained his seat in Congress till his death.

For a long term of years Samuel J. Randall presented to the world the remarkable and consistent of a man whose life was a grand political party who was at war with that party in respect to one of its most vital doctrines. That he should so long have wielded so strong a control over the Democratic party while at the same time antagonizing it in the national legislature, in respect to certain public policies, is a fact that has made a determined policy to secure, is a marvel difficult to account for, but proving one thing in a demonstration: Randall was a wonderfully able leader of men. He could not otherwise have retained his leadership of those against whom he constantly placed himself in opposition.

Randall was a thorough Democrat, but he was also a determined and consistent advocate of freedom. He held around him in Congress a small following of professional Democrats, but he and they were but a handful compared to the mass of Democratic members. On fiscal questions he fought his party, but on all others he led it.

Randall was born in Philadelphia, October 14, 1828, and was consequently in his sixty-second year. His father was a prominent lawyer and politician. He was educated at the University of Pennsylvania, and then to the city council of his native city, and was elected to the State Senate. Next he was elected to the lower house of Congress, in which he took his seat near the close of 1850, and ever since that time he has represented in that body the only Democratic district in Philadelphia. He has served on the most important committees of the House, and in 1878 became chairman of that on appropriations. This position enabled him to exercise some of his plans for a curbing of public expenditures, and he gained much credit for his efforts in the direction of economy. In 1878 he became Speaker and was twice re-elected to that position, serving until March 3, 1881.

His popularity believed that he had been for his time on the tariff. He would have received the democratic nomination for President in 1876. There is no doubt that he was one of the ablest and purest of the present generation of American statesmen.

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

It is impossible to longer dispute the fact that a decline in real estate values has set in, and that it is producing intense anxiety on the part of a numerous class of dealers, whose confidence in the future has led them to extend their means of meeting the emergencies of the present. There is no money to be borrowed, and as a result real estate men's jobs, it is the whole city is for sale. Of course, this is an exaggeration, but it is a fact that the sources are not. But it is a fact that the city with which prices have been dropping, and the winter, led to the purchase of property, which are now listed. It is, indeed, the highest prices to which they could possibly be obtained, at least for some time to come, about six weeks ago. Then there supervened a short period during which the market was stationary. Then the terms of payment taken, when the activity was so great, began to draw out, and the market, producing a tendency to shade the figures at which properties were held, in order, if possible, to save at least a part of the money paid for the options. Of course, under these circumstances, the temperature of opinion has risen rapidly in the hands of those unable to make their good, and there is a consequent eagerness to get rid of them. More than one speculator has been smothered already, and there exists on the part of others a strong desire to use a large amount of money in the market, or, at least, to make it easier for themselves.

The Almighty has promised that there will be a change from the present condition, and the people have an implicit confidence in His word. There may be some principles which we believe in that the world reject. But our belief is in the principles set forth in the Bible—the book upon which the Christian religion is based. We believe in the word of God, and we are willing to abide by the results of His will. We believe that the world is in a state of rebellion, and we are willing to abide by the results of His will. We believe that the world is in a state of rebellion, and we are willing to abide by the results of His will.

PLENTY OF DUST AND WATER.

There is dust everywhere in this beautiful city. The city winds are blowing it about, making it compulsory upon pedestrians to carry in their eyes and noses a preparation of mud. It is a fact that there is no more dust in this city than there is in any other city. The dust is not a problem, it is a fact that there is no more dust in this city than there is in any other city. The dust is not a problem, it is a fact that there is no more dust in this city than there is in any other city.

THE anti-Mormon howler. This silence because of "Liberal" council is running the city business. What was "moralism" in the highest evidence of progress in those of the other side.

AN UNMITIGATED SNUB.

This "Ministers' Association" of this city has taken up a labor with the organ of the sectarian clergy of Utah, in order to induce it to cease the issuance of its Sunday edition. In support of their position the gentlemen of the church present four reasons, all of which are sound enough, but they have no more weight with the parties addressed than the pouring of so much water over a red-hot coal.

The signers of the appeal are R. G. McConkie, Pastor First Presbyterian Church; John E. Harburt, Pastor Phillips Congregational Church; J. A. Keadle, Pastor Swedish Lutheran Church; W. S. Hawley, Supd. Congregational Mission Work; F. L. Arnold, Pastor Westminster Presbyterian Church; De Witt D. Forward, Pastor First Baptist Church.

It is pleasing to note the fact that the plea put forth in the east that there is no valid reason why the "Mormons" should be believed in and practice a genuine system of Christianity is beginning to be acknowledged as a mere pretense. This effort on the part of the clergy to convert the publishers of their own organ is in the line of an admission in that direction. But note the ungrateful reply of the object of ministerial solicitation. It says:

"The argument turned around may be made to read this way: 'For certainly there is no valid reason why a minister of the gospel should open his place of business on the Sabbath in order to make his weekly salary for the alleged salvation of the public—necessities of whom never hear him—such would not equally justify, etc.'"
