

SOLUTION OF THE TRAMP PROBLEM.

Salt Lake's Position, Together With That of Fifty-One Other Cities, on This Most Vexatious Municipal Question.

The tramp problem is one with which not only Salt Lake but every big city in the United States is wrestling. To solve it is the one consideration, schemes and plans innumerable have been devised, but up to date it can be safely said that not one of them has brought forth the desired results. Recently three questions were propounded to the police department of this city, all bearing on this problem. The first was, "Is outdoor relief advisable?" the second, "Are Salvation Army hotels a benefit?" and the third "Does free transportation increase tramps?" To the first the answer was "no," to the second the answer was "no," to the third the answer was "no."

The solution of the tramp problem has always been rendered difficult by the lack of knowledge of true conditions prevailing in various states and by the absence of uniform action by the municipal authorities of the leading cities. The first definite data that have been secured in this important feature of municipal legislation have been collected during the last summer and these have placed the details of the whole subject in such convenient and ready form that intelligent action may be taken by every city in the country during the coming winter.

The three most salient points brought out by these answers may be expressed thus: 1. The cessation of indiscriminate outdoor relief is necessary if American cities are to be cleared of the tramp evil. 2. The cheap Salvation Army lodging houses, as they are generally conducted, are a detriment to the city, but in certain cities, especially where they are under direct municipal supervision, the good they do to the tramp is such that they are worth maintaining. 3. The free transportation which tramps are able to secure on many railroads by "beating their way," and which is not dealt with as severely as might be desired, is a serious factor in the prevalence of this class in the United States.

Here, then, are the three primary points on which to build a platform for municipal reform. Without these other reforms are useless, and by them alone the evil can be greatly mitigated. The first of these can be obtained only by wide publicity being given to the evils of the tramp system and by the charitable minded people of American cities realizing that it is a truer kindness to help the tramp to help himself than to aid him by "handouts" or gifts of money, which tend to pauperization. The second is a far easier matter to deal with. There is scarcely a police chief in this State who would not accord to the Salvation Army the highest credit for the good it has accomplished and is accomplishing in the slums, but an overwhelming majority of opinion states that its cheap lodging houses as they are generally conducted are a detriment to the cities in which they are found. Obviously what is to be done in this regard is to review carefully those institutions which are successful on the same line. Municipal supervision is advisable in cities which do not possess a municipal lodging house. Both municipality and Salvation Army should be willing to help each other in the highest possible degree. All this, of course, is equally true of lodging houses that are run by the kinds of missions where the same conditions prevail as those with which the Salvation Army deals.

INFATUATED WITH DWARF

A Southern romance, through which is woven the story of a woman's infatuation for the paint and tinsel of a wandering mountebank, was told in Justice Hurley's court. In the dreary justice courtroom, through the windows of which came the clamor and rumble of the noisy Chicago streets, J. A. Thomas told the quiet home in the sunny south which his wife had deserted to follow Harry Le Pearl in his travels.

It was only a few years ago, he said, that he married Leola Hughes, considered one of the belles of Nashville, Tenn. He was then a merchant in comfortable circumstances. Since then his business has prospered until now he is one of the influential men of that Tennessee city. They married life, he said, was a court to understand, was unclouded by any cloud until the arrival of Le Pearl, and the beginning of the woman's strange infatuation.

Le Pearl was in the justice court charged with threatening to kill Thomas in Chicago a few days ago. He denied the charge and asked that he be discharged under a peace bond. He promised that he would try to avoid the woman, and the court granted his wish. Even after these proceedings the woman refused to live with her husband again or to return to her home in Nashville.

The man for whom she left her husband is a middle aged man, a cripple, paralyzed from his hips down and with lower limbs that are not developed more than those of a child. However, he is a man of intelligence and a good conversationalist.

The third would be the easiest of all if the railroads could be induced to take up the matter. It is a matter of common knowledge that tramps "beat their way" in almost all cases with the assistance of the railroads. Some times the tramps pay a little if they have any money, often they do not, but on only a few railroads through-out the country is a rigorous system carried out by which the train employees drive away all loafers from the cars and yards. Further, along the lines where railroad police are active the tramp nuisance is far less malignant. Interesting comparisons could be made of the tramp population in cities tapped by railroads the rules of which are stern and carried out with rigidity and those which let the tramps alone; but that is a matter to be dealt with separately.

The following table shows the general opinion of police chiefs on these three points:

SORE EYES CURED

"Actina," a Wonderful Discovery which Cures Diseased Eyes, No Matter Whether Chronic or Acute, Without Cutting or Drugging.

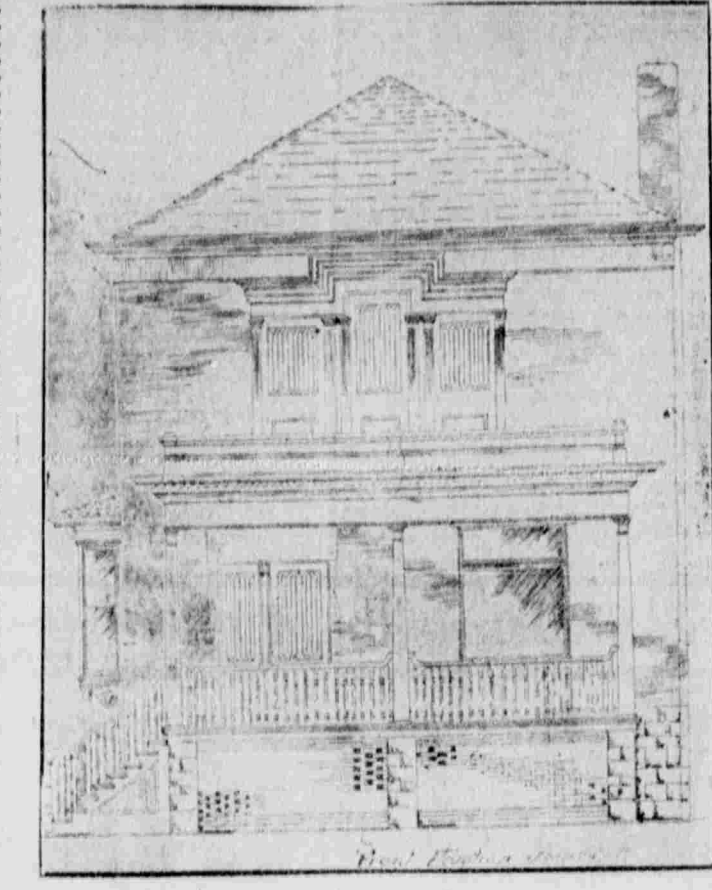

There is no need for cutting, drugging or probing the eye for any form of disease. For a new system of treating all diseases of the eye has been discovered, whereby all tortuous and barbarous methods are eliminated. This wonderful treatment takes the form of a Paste, and is known as "Actina." It is only a home remedy, and is administered by the patient. There is no risk of experimenting, as thousands of people have been cured of blindness, failing eyesight, cataracts, granulated lids and other afflictions of the eye through this grand discovery, when eminent oculists termed the cause incurable. This wonderful remedy also makes the use of spectacles unnecessary, as it not only removes the weakened and unnatural conditions of the eye, but gives it a clear vision.

Gr. nulated Sore Eyes Cured.

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 20, 1901. Gentlemen—Having used your Actina for three months I am anxious to tell you of the results of that treatment. My eyes have improved very much since I used the Actina. The eyelids, which were in a state of inflammation, are no longer granulated or painful; the red inflammation in the eyes has entirely disappeared, and the agonizing pain that I used to suffer almost constantly has left almost entirely. Respectfully, MISS L. FLEURY.

Severe Inflammation of Eyes Cured.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 5th, 1899. Gentlemen—Last winter I was troubled with inflammation of eyes almost the whole winter, and sometimes for several weeks in succession, but since I have used Actina I have not had one spell of inflammation. I feel very grateful toward you, and wish I had heard of Actina a great deal sooner. Yours truly, AUGUST Y. FRY, 132 Oak St.

NEW RESIDENCE OF JAMES W. SAVILLE.

Above is the elevation of a new residence for J. W. Saville at C and Sixth streets from plans prepared by Architect S. T. Whitaker. The house is to be of pressed brick and white cut stone, with natural wood interior finish. There will be eight rooms and a basement.

Then Le Pearl became a snake charmer. Even then the woman did not lose her infatuation for the misshapen little man. She became a snake charmer, too. A few weeks ago the couple came to Chicago. Both secured engagements at a downtown museum. The woman had found a more novel act than that of a snake charmer, and dressed in oriental robes, depicted life in the interior of a Chinese opium den. Le Pearl's performance had been enlarged into an act where, as "Esau, the wild man," he appeared every night in a cage full of rattlesnakes.

Thomas came again to the north to get his wife. He found her still enamored of Le Pearl. The performer denied in court that there was any love on his part for the woman. He said he had secured her a position, but did not want her company. He promised to do all he could to avoid her, but she protested that she would still follow him.—Chicago Chronicle.

WATER IN FORM OF ICE.

For the manufacture and sale of Wisconsin mineral water in the form of ice, The Waukesha-Minnska Mineral Water Ice company, capital stock $1,250,000, will be organized in this city within the next few days. The company will purchase the property of the Minnska Mineral Springs Water company and will erect a refrigerating plant capable of manufacturing 120 tons of ice a day. The ice will be sold in large and small quantities direct to private consumers for use in office or home ice water fountains and the principal distributing point will be Milwaukee, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Louisville.

"Our idea is to dispense of the mineral water in the shape of ice so as to save to the consumer the cost of the ice ordinarily bought to cool the various drinks," said Mr. Kent. "Ordinarily the ice is sold now in bottles and cans," said Mr. Kent. "Ordinarily the ice is sold now in bottles and cans," said Mr. Kent.

"In the first place we can make ice of the Minnska spring water, retaining all the original mineral properties, the water melting in the consumer's tank and returning to its natural form as sweet, pure and health giving as when taken from the spring. We can furnish the ice at less than we could furnish the water, as the cost of shipping ice from Wisconsin lakes to Milwaukee and Chicago is 35 cents a hundred pounds, while the cost of shipping water is 7 cents for the same weight. The ice will be as valuable as a refrigerator, the melting ice furnishing clean, pure water for drinking purposes, if the ice chamber is kept clean. We can furnish the ice for the same price as ice manufactured from distilled water."

"Our largest field will probably be the big office buildings where each tenant at present has to buy mineral drinking water at one price and ice to cool it at another price, paying both for the service of the water and service of the ice. We furnish the ice and water at one time at half the ordinary cost. We shall install a big system at the World's fair at St. Louis, and this will be the opening wedge into the great southwest, where we expect to open up a big field for our water."—Milwaukee Sentinel.
