

Bannock county, Ida., called on the NEWS and reported his return from the Southern States mission field, whither he went April 13, 1895. He labored in the East Tennessee conference where he reports Church matters in good shape and on a gradual improvement. The prejudice that formerly existed is fast crumbling away, and the Elders are enjoying their labors among a kind-hearted people. Taken as a whole the health of the Elders is good, and inquiry as to the principles of the Gospel is daily increasing. Elder Hubbard returns in good health well pleased with the experience he has had.

COMES HOME WITH HONORS.

The ranks of the medical profession in this city have just been strengthened by the addition to them of Dr. H. A. Anderson, who has recently returned from Boston, where he has spent five years in the study and practice of medicine and surgery. Dr. Anderson is a native of Lehi and was raised in Provo, where he spent eight years as pupil and teacher in the Brigham Young academy. Five years ago he entered Harvard medical school and was fairly under way with his studies when the panic swept away his source of income, and he was thrown upon his own resources for means to sustain himself.

In this emergency he had the temerity to conceive and introduce a remarkable innovation into the staid and conservative institution in which he was studying. He was an expert stenographer, and reported the medical lectures as they were delivered to the class, which comprised some 400 students. He then reproduced the lectures on a mimeograph, in book form, and sold sets of them to students. In this way he earned money sufficient to maintain himself, and also kept in the very van of his class.

In time each student in the medical school came to regard a set of "Anderson's Notes" as indispensable, and there is no question that they were a great aid to the students. The use of the volumes spread from the school among the medical practitioners throughout the state of Massachusetts, and the works have given the author quite a reputation. At each examination Mr. Anderson was among the best students, and he at length graduated with the degree "cum laude."

In the spring of 1895 the annual examination of candidates for the position of house surgeon of the Boston city hospital was held. There were twenty of them from the leading medical colleges of the United States, but the Provo youth captured the prize. It is a highly desirable position, and he held it for a year and a half, when he became an assistant to one of the leading surgeons in Boston. He also spent several months as assistant in the obstetric clinic of the Boston Lying-in hospital. In his studies and work he maintained the usual reputation of students from Utah, who are generally found in the van.

Dr. Anderson has just opened an office at 226 East Temple street, and has taken up his residence at 646 East Second South street. The Mutual Aid association of the Salt Lake railroad employees has secured his services as the first physician and surgeon to that organization, and has been fortunate in doing so.

NEWS NOTES.

The snow blockade on the Wyoming railroads has been raised.

According to latest reports from the Wyoming storm the loss to stock will be very great, whole herds being destroyed. The Warren live stock company reports a loss of 6,000 sheep.

Seventeen-year-old Emma Griffiths died at the receiving hospital, in San Francisco on Monday, from the effects of a dose of arsenic taken when she thought her sweetheart had deserted her.

The English skylarks, bullfinches, goldfinches and thrushes which were imported into Mill valley, Cal., last year have done remarkably well, and other importations of song birds will be made this year.

News has reached Cheyenne, Wyo., that a ranch hand at one of the Warren sheep camps left the ranch house to go to the corral during the storm, and has not been heard from since. Superintendent Gleason of the Warren Live Stock company says that while every effort has been made to find the man, no trace of him has been discovered.

Mr. McKeever, driver of the Little Horse creek stage, reported that on Tuesday night he had found four abandoned wagons filled with hogs near Horse creek, Wyoming. Six of the hogs had been turned loose and the seventh had succumbed to the storm and was found lying in the snow. Stockmen organized relief expeditions and sent them out in hopes of finding the men.

Herman Abel, a stonecutter, was shot and seriously wounded Monday afternoon by John Canning, a shoemaker, in a saloon at Bernal Heights, Cal. A dispute arose between them, which culminated in blows. Getting the worst of the encounter, Canning drew a revolver and fired at his adversary. The bullet struck Abel in the right side of the neck.

Amos S. Evans, a resident of San Jose, Cal., since early pioneer days and one of the best known citizens of Santa Clara county, fell dead at his home in East San Jose Sunday morning. Mr. Evans was walking from his house to the street car, on his way to church, when he was seen to fall. Friends rushed to his aid but it was found that he was dead. The cause of death was heart failure.

The frozen body of another victim of last Tuesday and Wednesday's blizzard in Wyoming was rescued Tuesday, having been found by a band of cowboys. The deceased was John Lucano, a Mexican shepherd employed by Senator Warren. This makes three persons who perished in the storm. The missing Johnson boys have not been found, although searchers are still riding the plains.

Wilcox, Arizona Range news: Mr. Robt. Hannigan, who owns a herd of cattle on the Blue, was at Bowie Thursday, en route from Solomonville to New Mexico. Mr. Hannigan recently purchased for northern buyers all the steers for sale on the Blue, and they will be shipped from Magdalena, N. M. We understand that he has bought 2,000 cows from the Champion Cattle Co. of Graham county, at a figure satisfactory to both parties.

William Godfrey, a seaman from the receiving ship Independence at Mare Island, San Francisco, is at the receiving hospital with a bullet wound in his back and a bullet somewhere in his abdomen. He had been in the city for several days enjoying himself, and on Thursday night he slept in a room in the rear of a saloon. He essayed Friday night to find his resting place again, but was taken for a burglar and was fired at twice, both bullets taking effect. He may die.

The printers, bookbinders and pressmen of Sacramento, Cal., are up in arms against Governor Budd and the San Francisco Examiner and Chronicle for their hostility toward the state printing office. The organizations of wage-earners claim to voice the sentiment of organized labor on the issue that has been made by the executive and in which he is backed up by the newspapers. The three bodies met Monday night and adopted resolutions in which they give expression to their indignation.

Fred Kollman, a cook, was shot and slightly wounded Monday night in San Francisco by William J. Sinele, his brother-in-law. Several months ago Sinele's house was entered and about $300 worth of jewelry and clothing taken. It was learned recently that Kollman had sold part of the stolen property and his brother-in-law concluding he was the thief, determined to have him arrested. They met on the street, and Kollman denied the charge and threatened to shoot Sinele. The latter quickly drew his revolver and fired at his brother-in-law, the bullet entering his hip.

A Union Pacific freight train was ditched by a broken rail at Sherman, Wyo., on Tuesday. No one was injured, but trains were delayed three hours.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Bryan, the late Democratic candidate for President, called at the White House today with Representative McMillen, Tenn., and Attorney General Smith, Neb., to pay his respects to his late opponent. He was greeted warmly by McKinley. The latter said he had received a copy of Bryan's book a few days ago, but had not yet had time to read it.

After an exchange of courtesies and pleasantries, Bryan retired. He expressed a desire to be shown through the White House, and Doorkeeper Dubois conducted him through the various parlors and the conservatory. In the main corridor, just as he was emerging he met Mrs. McKinley, who was going out for a drive, and saluted her cordially. Bryan was besieged with newspaper men, who asked for his views on the Ohio and Michigan elections yesterday. "They indicate that confidence has been restored," he said laughingly, "and no explanation is needed from me; they speak for themselves."
