

"During the week," said Jack, "we will look up the cases of destitution and suffering, and on next Saturday afternoon we will meet at the corner of the city hall, and we will take up ten dollars, and do what we can for those who are suffering most. We must be methodical in this. We are not to spend a penny in this work of charity which is not saved by the cutting off of some useless expenditure of our own; and he of us who buys a cigar through the week shall deduct it from his contribution on Saturday."

"If we would be methodical," suggested Peter, "we must organize. I say, if we are going to do anything of this kind, let us do it in a proper way. Peter's proposition was unanimously accepted, and thereupon they proceeded to organize. The organization arrived at was very simple, but nevertheless effective. They elected John Digby to serve as President, and as Treasurer, and as Secretary; and then they elected an Executive Committee of four, consisting of John Digby, Peter Slade, Tom Lowden, and Sam Pepper. And then they settled the bill at the bar and went home."

Saturday evening came, and the Reform Club met at Digby's shop, and suffering, and on next Saturday afternoon we will meet at the corner of the city hall, and we will take up ten dollars, and do what we can for those who are suffering most. We must be methodical in this. We are not to spend a penny in this work of charity which is not saved by the cutting off of some useless expenditure of our own; and he of us who buys a cigar through the week shall deduct it from his contribution on Saturday."

"My soul!" exclaimed Sam Pepper, "I never dreamt of this sorrow and suffering there was right here in our little town. Last night I went down to the Widow Bashiot's, and I found her, with a sick child, absolutely freezing and starving."
