ADMISSION AS A TATE

Now that Congress is again assembled, the question of new States is pached once more. First Color ado, being a favorite Territory with many, in fact rather popular, is presented for discussion. There seems to be a sanguine feeling in Colorado among the friends of admission in regard to their success the present session of Congress. Then may come New Mexico again, which has a large population and many other claims which should secure her a respectful hear-

We see no valid objection to the admission of either of the above Territories as States in the Union, if the people thereof respectively desire it. After all, that is the great and most important question. The condition of a Territory is a condition of tutelage, of undeniable and undeserved civil inferiority. Citizens of Territories are not full citizens of the Union, while they remain in the Territory. Their position is an anomalous one. In many respects they are deprived of the right of suffrage, of the right of voiceful representation, and consed to quently of the distinctive American right of local self-government. The most intelligent, admirably endowed, and thoroughly cultivated Caucasian in the Territories has not equal rights and privileges with the most ignorant and brutal negro in the States. This is really of the nature of an outrage. The Caucasian in the Territories is in many The Proctor-Moulton libel suit was set for trial to-day, but a postponement is expected. instances arbitrarily ruled over officers, like officers to which in the State the ignorant negro is federally protected in choosing for himself. This is a glaring anomaly

> Why should they be kept everlastingly and against their will in a condition of semi-alienship? What good policy is there in that? Let them have the full benefits of union and citizenship, that they may be perfectly one with the rest of the Union, and not feel that their position is one of disparagement, and depreciation. Don't let them longer have cause to feel that the worst negroes in the States have superior rights and privileges to the best white people in the Territories.

THE MASONS OPPOSED. Now the ancient Order of Masons is in a bad way, that is, it is made the object of a good deal of opposition once more. The head of the order in England has recently gone over to the Church of Rome, that church Ganta De Can the order, and extra rigid Protest-ants are equally opposed to what they term secret societies. So that "the brethren of the mystic tie" are opposed on more than one side. and are placed, at best, between two fires, and those directed largely by religious bigots. The order however, has sustained many severe attacks, and still thrives.

RELIGION AND MORALITY .- Dr. G. Holland talks in the following severe fashion of rigid religionists and morality-

"If any one will take up the early colonial records of New England he will be surprised and shocked at the amount of gross immorality which he will find recorded there. Rigidity of doctrine, the fulmina-tion of the most terrific punishment in the future life, the passage and the execution of the most searching and definitive laws against every and definitive lews against every form of social vice, go hand in hand with every form of vice. There was adultery in high places and adultery in low. Slander held high carnival. Common scolds were almost toe common to be noteworthy. In brief, it seems that a religion which makes most of its orthodoxy, or most of its frames or emotions o or most of its frames or emotions of mind is a religion most divorced from morality. A man who is told that the genuineness of his religion depends mainly upon the orthodoxy of his faith, or mainly upon the raptures or his mental experience, is either partly demonstrated by his reception of the statement, or specially unfitted to meet the temptations of his life."

The Omaha Bridge, The House took up the bill under consideration yesterday, in refer-ence to the railroad bridge at Omaha. Houghton, who has charge of the bill, said that since the matter was up yesterday, telegrams had been received which went to show that proceedings now before the United States court involved the same question as was presented in the bill; if the court should decide that the bridge was a continuous part of the Union Pacific, then there would be no necessity for the proposed legislation, but if the de-

THE PEN. It looks as if the problem of a successful writing machine had been at last solved, and that for the future there is to be a great simplification and saving of cierical labor. Superintendent Kline, of the Lake Shere Telegraph Lines, has now in his office an admirable little machine, which writes, or rather prints, any sort of a letter or document, in the neatest and most legible manner, and as rapidly if not much more so, than the penmanship could be executed by a skilled cierk. A writer in the Arcadian, speaking of "The American Girl at Home," says:

the fiedglings. All this we could bear, but they have left us despised by our only true friends through their knavish representations and unmitigated falsehoods. Our experience in this direction, for which we have amply paid; invites a change on our part, therefore, invoking the sheltering ægis of almighty God, in whose goodness, mercy and wisdom we trust for our future guidance, we resolve that, embracing the bonest, truthful adpointment of simplicity which is ingrained in the heart of the American girl of fashion in very early years. She has drunk copiously of the oxymel of precocious coquetry leng before she is capable of appreciating the glory of true fashion and the fun of that efflorescence of passion of which true coquetry consists. We are not especial admirers of children who are constitutionally shame-faced, who hang their heads before company, and creen back in embracing the honest, truthful advice of our late friend Thomas Swan, we now and forever shake off those unwarranted fears that have been created, and preyed as a bugaboo upon the minds of our simple child who has been brought up under the bell-glass of society, and has nothing left in it excepting the original sin, which crops out in the form of impertinence. It is this abnermal self-possession which is the early characterestic of the American girl. For this she has to thank her mother and the fashionable fools who are her mother's friends. It is inevitable that the adolescence of such a child should be marked with much that is fast and morbid and trenching on the verge of 1795 Belcher, 48, 47; 47, 47; 47, 46; viciousness. In this school she as quires these meretricious manners that slang, that swagger, the devil-may-care air, which have resi dered her a notoriety wherever at has travelled abroad. The foreign who comes to this country, and who observes the free-and-easy manners of our youth, and especially young girls, is amazed at their boldness and recklessness. We are from a grain that has been planted and tended with such malicious are made, it is irrigation. Girls are made, it is true, for something else than to fit into some quiet nook at home, and rest contentedly there the remainder of life. "There are some good, plous sould we know who would have every young woman, rich and poor, educated in the arts of housekeeping.

They would have Clorinda, whose father is a billionare, descend to the kitchen, make bread and pas-try, and familiarize herself with the practical working out of all the more common recipes in the cook-book, just as they would expect the same task from Jane Smith, whose papa is not worth anything at all. How far these advisers are in the right it may be difficult to deter-mine, but the fault with the average American girl, who belds not ther a very high noravery low posi-tion in life, is that she does not ac-quaint herself with any of these processes, and if, like Henrietta, in Les Femmes Savantes,' she were asked what she saw in marriage to attract, all the answer that she could honestly give would be, 'a husband.' This is sensible, so far as it goes; but we run in danger of seeming very humdrum when we add that if a husband is to be expected to remain all that a young and exacting wife wishes him to be, the kitchen and its correllatives must receive a large share of that wife's attention."

"THE HEAVENS ARE TELLING." -About 8 o'clock last night the at-tention of numerous citizens on Gay street was attracted to the well defined appearance of a Latin cross reaching over the face of the full moon. The weather was hazy, and the appearance of the cross was somewhat like nebulæ, distinct, but not as bright as the moon. The upright or perpendicular line of the cross was apparently two blocks in length, while the horizontal was scarce half the length. The phenomena continued full fifteen minutes, and inspired feel-ings very akin to awe in the minds of all who beheld it. A gentle-man residing ten miles below the city informed us that he had noticed the same appearance on the setting sun last evening, the cross being very plain, though the lewer portion of the apright line was seemingly beneath the horizon.

When the Crusaders went marching toward the Holy City, eight centuries ago, their commander saw the same sign in the heavens, and "In Hoc. Upon closer examination, he discovered that the man he shot at, was sitting upon a lever, which had been inserted in a crack, and the house bodily lifted up, while two others were in the crack getting out the corn. A still closer examination were in the crack getting out the corn. A still closer examination revealed the horrifying fact that, as the first man fell from the lever, the house had closed down upon the unfortunate wretches, mashing the life out of them!
