CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, 6.—Booth presented petitions from the citizens of California, praying for the passage of the law making greenbacks legal tender for duties on imports; referred to the committee on finance. He also presented petitions of citizens of California, remonstrating against the passage of the House bill to amend the Revised Statutes in relation to merchant seamen; referred to committee on commerce.

Mr. Hamlin, from the committee on post offices and post roads, reported back the Senate bill in relation to the postal routes, and conferring certain privileges upon telegraph companies, with a resolution from the State of California on the same subject, and said as these subjects all contained propositions of law, it was thought best to have them referred to the judiciary committee; so ordered.

Sargent called up the resolution submitted by him some weeks ago, recommending changes in the existing treaty with China, so as to prevent the influx of Chinese immigration, and modified it to read as follows:

"Resolved, That in the opinion of the Senate, negotiations should be entered upon with the government of China and Great Britain to effect such changes in the existing treaties as will tend to check the great influx of Chinese coolies and criminals to this country."

Sargent said the matter of Chinese immigration was a terrible evil to the whole Pacific Coast, and the least the Senate could do was, through the executive department, to ask the other governments interested if they would co-operate with us to keep from our shores these criminals.

Edmunds said this subject was of too much importance in its aspect for the Senate to decide hastily; however right the proposition of the Senator of California might seem to be, it might turn out, on reflection, that it was not right, and ought not to be done. He moved that the resolution be referred to the committee on foreign relations.

Sargent opposed the reference, and said he did so because the matter had been before the committee on foreign relations for the past year without any result. A year ago he presented a petition signed by 2,000 of the leading citizens of San Francisco against Chinese immigration. If this were a bill prescribing penalties or rules the details might be fixed by the committee. He did not think he would be just to his people if he should consent to the reference. There had been two political conventions held recently. The republican convention at Cincinnati passed a resolution showing that the party was in sympathy with the people of the Pacific slope on this subject. The democratic convention at St. Louis was more specific and positive; all going to show that the people of the country were in sympathy with the people of the Pacific Coast. He thought the Senate should now take notice of the matter, and pass the resolution.

Edmunds said he did not consider it as unfriendly to the resolution to have it referred. It was an important subject, and should be considered by the committee. He wanted to get at the facts.

Hamilton opposed the resolution, and said, if this was the idea of American freedom it was time to pull out the tail feathers of the American eagle and clip his wings. (Laughter.)

Hamlin said Chinese emigration was an evil which demanded the serious attention of our Government, but it would not be settled by a resolution like this. He did not think it belonged to the Senate to indicate to the executive what should or should not be done in its negotiations with foreign powers. The Senate might make itself obnoxious if it sought to say what should be the provisions of a treaty in advance.

Morton said he was satisfied the Executive would not act without having the fullest information. The right way to get hold of this would be for the Senate to appoint a commission to investigate the character and effect of the Chinese immigration.

Howe also spoke in favor of referring the subject to the committee on foreign relations.

Sargent said if he had the slightest hope of getting a report from that committee, he would consent to it being referred with pleasure.

Morton submitted the following as a substitute for the resolution of Sargent—

"Resolved, That a committee of three senators be appointed to investigate the character, extent and effect of Chinese emigration to this country, with power to visit the Pacific Coast for that purpose and send for persons and papers, and report at the next session of Congress."

Edmunds' motion to refer the subject to the foreign relations committee was rejected, 16 to 32, and Morton's substitute was agreed to.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the articles of impeachment against Belknap. After the witnesses for the prosecution were called, only three of whom, F. T. Bartlett, C. P. Morse, and E. M. Lanton, answered. Manager Lynde opened the case on the part of the prosecution. He gave a long recital of the circumstances in which Marsh's contract with Belknap was concluded.

At the end of the argument, Adams, clerk of the House, was called as the first witness.

At this point Black made the general objection that the Senate had not voted in favor of jurisdiction by a two-thirds majority.

After debate Carpenter submitted the following: The counsel for the accused object to the evidence now offered and to all evidence to support the opening of the managers on the ground that there can be no legal conviction, one-third of the Senate having already determined the material and necessary fact that he is not, and was not when impeached, a civil officer of the United States.

Overruled by a unanimous vote.

Adams then gave his testimony, which merely related to formalities.

Bartlett, of New York, attorney, testified that he drew up the contract between Marsh and Evans. The defense declined to cross-examine Morse.

The next witness was Adams' express agent. He produced the books of the company showing the passage of parcels said to contain money from Marsh to Belknap and Mrs. Belknap; knew nothing of the contents except what was marked outside.

Dodge, clerk in the same company, testified that he delivered these packages to Belknap and had his receipts therefor; also to Mrs. B. and had her receipts.

Crosby, chief clerk of the War Department, testified and identified Belknap's signature. The witness further testified to letters between Belknap and Marsh, about the appointment of Evans.

General McDowell was the next witness. He testified to conversations with Belknap, in which witness told him the post traderships were a monopoly, and that Belknap should see to it that it was not abused. Belknap agreed, and required witness to draw up an order to correct the abuses, which he did. This order, requiring an examination of goods, fixing the prices, and forbidding sub-letting, was subsequently promulgated by Belknap.

The managers here attempted to offer the evidence of General Hazen, which had been previously essayed by the Senate. Rejected, 20 against 21.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, 6.—Ward, on behalf of the managers conducting the impeachment of Belknap, offered a resolution directing the clerk of the House to appear before the senate, sitting as a court of impeachment, with such papers of the House as the managers may require, and giving permission to the members of the committee on expenditures in the War Department to appear and give testimony before said court, and to produce such papers as the managers may require; adopted.

The House then took up the Geneva award bill. It rejected the bill of the minority and refused to lay the majority bill on the table by a vote of 95 to 113, and finally the bill was passed by 108 to 94.

Randall reported that the conference committee on the legislative bill had been unable to agree. A debate ensued, to which Randall put a stop by moving the previous question, the republicans desiring a further resort to filibustering.

EASTERN.

More Particulars of the Iowa Flood Disaster.

DUBUQUE, Ioa., 6.—A Herald reporter, just arrived from the scene of the Rockdale river hurricane, reports that up to this time but one more body has been found, that of the girl Minnie Bauer. Her sister, Lizzie Bauer, is now known to be missing, which will swell the number of lost to forty-one, of which only thirty-three have as yet been found. Funeral services are being held on the bank of the stream for such of the dead as have surviving friends. It is not unlikely some have been swept into the Missouri River and will never be recovered. The Telegraph Company are hard at work to restore communication.

The Central Railroad Company have a large force of men at work at both ends of the break from Dubuque to Julian, a distance of nine and a half miles, but it will be two weeks before the trains are in running order. In the meantime the company have arranged for the transfer of passengers and mails this distance by stages. Such a devastation never before visited this country. The damage in the city of Dubuque will not be repaired in many months. It is impossible to estimate the loss.

Still More of the Frightful Flood Disaster.

CHICAGO, 6.—The following further particulars of the storm near Dubuque, Iowa, on the night of the 4th, have been received: The little hamlet of Rockdale, three miles south west of this city, was swept away as with the besom of destruction. Every building in the town, save Catfish mill, was washed from its foundation and torn into a wreck that quite defies description. The dozen buildings, all that were located on the bottom lands of the Catfish creek, were carried down the storming and boiling current, crushing them into fragments. All are indistinguishable ruins, and scattered for miles along the borders of the stream. Stores, sheps, dwellings, barns, and everything fell before the terrible tornado that came rolling in great surges down ten miles of valley through which the Catfish river runs. Where eighteen hours ago was a quiet and unsuspecting and happy little rural village, is now only a waste of waters, timber, the wreck of buildings, of household merchandize, mud and uprooted trees. For a full mile down the stream these fragments are strewn along the banks or piled in gorges from a few feet to twelve feet high. Thirty-nine human beings were hurriedly swept from life into the great maelstrom of death. Men, women and children to that number were drowned, and the stiff bodies of the thirty that have been rescued up to this hour, were ranged side by side along by the mill, awaiting the last sad funeral rites. Some of the bodies were found in the debris of the crushed buildings near the scene of their death, while others, and the greater part of them, were found along the banks from a few rods to a mile down the stream. Some were almost entirely hidden from view by the floods of mud that had swept along by the mad waters, with perhaps only a hand exposed to sight, or a foot or a portion of the face, or perhaps only a small portion of their clothes. A large number of children, boys and girls, ranging from three to twelve years old, comprise this dead holocaust, and altogether the scene was a most sickening one.

Through the day the people of the village had joined more or less in the festivities of the Centennial Fourth. In the evening the rain began to fall, and all took shelter in their houses, or at the stores or saloons.

About half an hour after midnight the Catfish river had become so swollen that the streets were overflowing, and escape to the surrounding highlands cut off. Higher and higher rose the rushing waters, while the storm kept pitilessly on. Down rolled the surging stream in great waves several feet high, and soon the smaller buildings were swept away.

At about one o'clock a. m., a portion of the dam gave way, and this was followed by the crash of the railroad bridge, the fragments of which went tearing down, striking the hotel and Horne's store, both of which were capsized, the former being torn to pieces and the latter swung against a large tree standing but a few feet away, against which it lodged, resting upon its side. Now the stream had grown to two thousand feet in width and fully twenty feet deep.

As the buildings were swept into the creek the inmates were hurried into the surging current, their voices crying out for help amidst the roar of the thunder and crash of the storm, while the lurid lightning flashed every minute, lighting up the dreadful scene for one instant and then leaving it blacker than before.

John K. Lussen's cooper shop first gave way, then came the hotel barn, then Peter B. Becker's house, then Martin Carr's saloon, then Thomas Blenk's store and Coat's blacksmith shop.

Mr. Horn and family luckily were saved; the house, as before stated, having lodged against a strong tree. The water had risen and driven all the family into the upper story, where they clung to the rafters and other projections and were able to keep their heads only above water.

Altogether the scene was one to touch a heart of stone.

Thousands of people have visited the scene during the day, and people are coming and going constantly. The neighbors, with kindly alacrity, opened their doors to such of the afflicted as remained, and afforded every comfort in their power. The bodies of the dead were washed by kind hands, and many of them taken into the dwellings near by. The members of the board of supervisors were early on the ground working like Trojans to recover the dead and giving them over to the living.

Thirty-one bodies of the drowned have been recovered, and the search will be continued until all are found.

Latest Reports.

The Journal's (Desmoines) Iowa special says, the latest reports show that the storm of Tuesday night extended throughout most of Central Iowa, and was terrific in effect. In Madison and Warren Counties fifteen persons were killed, and considerable damage done to live stock and crops.

Custer's Fight Confirmed.

The news, confirmatory of Custer's fight with the Indians on the Little Horn River, has been received at General Sheridan's headquarters.

Further Action Postponed—Contested Election Cases.

WASHINGTON, 6.—The committee on banking and currency met to-day, and postponed further action on the resolution for the repeal of the resumption act until Monday. This action is regarded as favorable for the final passage of the resolution by the committee.

The House committee on privileges and elections adopted the report to-day in the contested election case of Breaux vs. Darral of Louisiana, giving the seat to Darral. Also in the case of Baker vs. Mackey, of South Carolina. The committee reported no election in either case, which ousts Mackey, the sitting member from his seat.

The Geneva Award Bill.

The Geneva award bill, which passed the House to-day, makes it the duty of the court of Alabama claims commissioners to receive and examine and enter judgment upon two classes of claims, which are to be filed within six months, and the court is continued in existence till the 22nd of July, 1877. The first class are to consist of claims directly resulting from damage done on the high seas by confederate cruisers during the late rebellion, including vessels and cargoes taken or attacked on the high seas or pursued therefor, although destroyed within four miles of the shore, except as provided for in the existing law. The second class is to consist of claims for the payment of a premium for war risks, after the sailing of any confederate cruiser. In examining the second class of claims the court is to deduct any sums in any way received by or paid to the claimant, diminishing the amount paid for any such premium, so that the only usual loss of claimants shall be allowed. Judgments allowed in the first class of claims are to be paid before those entered on the second. If there be not money enough to pay the whole of the first class, judgment in that class shall be paid proportionately, and so also as to judgments in the second class.

Post Office Appropriation Bill.

The section in the post office appropriation bill in relation to third class mail matter, provides that all printed matter of third class, except circulars unsealed, is restored to the old rates; in other words, all transient newspapers, magazines, books and all printed matter, with the exception of circulars unsealed, will be restored to the former rates of one cent for every two ounces, while merchandize and unsealed circulars will remain at the present rates. The bill appropriates, in the aggregate, for the transportation of mails $15,887,851. That embraces stage routes and steamboat lines at $6,737,851, and railroad route at $9,100,000, against the estimates of the department of little more than $57,500,000, and a reduction upon the item of the transportation of mails of $1,662,149. There is nothing in the bill which affects the fast mails, such being by special arrangement between the Postmaster General and the railroads.

Shot and Killed.

SYRACUSE, 6.—Lewis H. Jones, hotel proprietor at Earlville, was shot and killed by a man last night to whom he refused to give a drink.

WEST INDIES.

Will Not Risk Another Battle—The Elections—Deaths—Don Carlos.

HAVANA, 6.—Advices from Mexico to June 28th, state that no engagement had occurred between the Government and revolutionary forces. The latter appear unwilling to risk another battle.

The preliminary elections for President will be held on July 9th. There was no opposing candidate to President Lerdo. The revolutionists are trying to prevent the holding of elections, and in a majority of the districts this may prevent the constitutional election.

The revolutionists claim that the re-election of Lerdo will ensure his overthrow. This probably will happen eventually, though the Government at the present time is able to maintain itself.

General Santa Anna died on the 20th of June, 84 years of age.

The levy of another extraordinary contribution is expected.

General Corrilla has died from the effects of his wounds.

Don Carlos, while here, was banqueted, and it is said lost a hundred thousand dollars at monte.
