

ANGELS JOIN IN THE CHORUS.

Give Stay-at-Homes an Idea of What They Found in Salt Lake.

TRIP WAS AN IDEAL ONE.

No Lines Were Drawn, but All Seemed Heed on Showing Visitors a Good Time.

Of the trip of the Los Angeles chamber of commerce to Salt Lake, the Herald of that city has the following:

A large prize offered for the discovery of a man who did not have a good time on the excursion to Salt Lake would go begging. If one could be found who could forget his honesty long enough to pull down the purse, the other 240 excursionists could be depended upon to form a mob with a definite purpose in view.

There are a few stragglers who will not return to Los Angeles until tomorrow, but this morning the Herald's mail cars filled with the Angel pilgrims, which is to arrive at 7 o'clock, will practically take in all those who left here a week ago.

The stay-at-homes, the unfortunate who did not have the opportunity of making the trip, will have Salt Lake dinned into their ears by the excursionists until its mention will become tiresome.

Every Angelino to return has come back tired, very tired, but the exhaustion has not been complete enough to keep his lips still. They start in to talk about the good times they had in before the train started on its way north, and kept on telling until they got to a point where the pilgrims entered the city limits on the return journey.

Each and every one bears the appearance of having tried to crawl through several knotholes and succeeded. They have handed over to Salt Lake the reputation Los Angeles has had for being the queen city when it comes to extending hospitality to those from without her gates.

Many things contributed to the pleasure of the visitors, and though some of the pleasures were small, they counted, notwithstanding.

WHAT NEWSPAPERS DID.

One of the large contributing factors to the successful manner in which the visitors were entertained was the newspapers. Each paper with a corps of reporters chased down every interesting incident of the five days' stay. From the lowest to the highest, the Angeli-nos were interviewed and photographed until they really believed they were of great importance. They were perfectly willing to pay for their popularity in the buying of the issues in which their names or photographs appeared, but it was no use. All Los Angeles money had a hole in it and although the papers were forthcoming, not a cent of Angelino money went over a newspaper's counter.

The staff of reporters detailed on the evening of the week were "the good fellows" of the party. They had lots of fun with the rest of the bunch, but they worked and they had the true prophecy and foresight. They knew Garner was looking at real estate and they found out that MacLeod had his eye open for a tract to sub-divide.
There were other things they discovered which they forgot before they reached their city editor, and the visitors were thankful for it.

Finley Harris, the secretary of the Commercial club, had many bouquets, nervously speaking, thrown at him.
He was the man for the emergency. He did not sleep any more than did the visitors, which was saying much, but he was always as fresh and bright and happy as the youngest and most childish of the Angels. He accomplished all the things it was said he would do, and the things it was said he would not do, and he had money to spare. The invitation was given in the name of the Commercial club, said to have 500 members, but the recipients are of the opinion that the Commercial club is synonymous with the population of the city of Salt Lake.

CORRESPONDENT'S VIEWS.

Burt A. Heinly, staff correspondent of the Herald, adds the following: Salt Lake is today looking over the events of the past week and wondering what has been the profit thereof. Officials of the Salt Lake road have their notebooks out figuring the cost of two special trains hauled a distance of 150 miles and seeking to put in the unit of figures that will show the profit; the last of the Angelinos, travel-stained and pleasure-worn, will return to their home city this morning, and they, too, will have discussed the changes for the better in their own city.

The Salt Lake excursion is over. Its events written in the pages of history of the development of the west have no counterpart in the past and can have no repetition in the future.

These great and growing cities of Salt Lake and Los Angeles will soon be too large and thriving to spare their men of business—those who make the wheels of each city's industries move, even for a week. Los Angeles at the present time is far from that period in its development.

RESULTS NOT THE SAME.

With no fear of contradiction, it may be said that the events of last week were history making for both cities and stand unique as such. It is true that during the opening days of May 275 citizens of Salt Lake visited Los Angeles under similar circumstances, but the results were not the same.

They visited the city's industries, San Pedro harbor, the pleasure resorts; they marveled at the possibilities, the permanent growth of this portion of the state, and they went home feeling that they had had a good time.
Incidentally, these 174 men learned to know each other, individually and collectively, better than ever before. This was something. While those men probably recognized the opportunities that the south land, they realized also that they have a great question to cope with at home, which is to take all their energy. Few came here to invest; all came for pleasure.

The visit of the Salt Lakeers to Los Angeles was an incident in the life of the convention city; its return by 250

Back Home California Pilgrims Tell What a Good Time They Had in This State.

COIN WOULDN'T BUY ANYTHING.

Were Treated to Banquets, Concerts, Salt Water Baths and a Thousand Other Things.

As told by the San Bernardino Sun, this is the impression the Utah trip made on a member of the delegation from that city:

"I don't want to be irreverent," declared E. D. Roberts yesterday, as he was shaking the desert dust and expanding his lungs with fresh air, "but it's the nearest to the place where things are without money and without price that any of that crowd of 300 California pilgrims will ever bump against in this world." Meaning Salt Lake.

"Why, do you know that our coin wouldn't buy anything over there?
Everything was waiting for us to walk off with it. Telegrams, telephones, street cars, bath houses, banquets, even newspapers were supplied until every man in the delegation felt like calling out, hold, enough! Such hospitality, open handed, enthusiastic generosity and welcome, no crowd of strangers out for a jaunt ever met with before, and even the Los Angeles members of the delegation admitted that they knew nothing about entertaining visitors in that city, when measured by the Salt Lake standard."

"We began to get a taste of it almost before we were fairly started.
When we got to Las Vegas Sunday morning, of course a lot of men wanted to send telegrams. The operator there was entirely willing to send the messages, but no money for it. And that thing continued, with infinite variations, until I left Salt Lake City on the return trip. Just to show the details, as it was worked out, every visitor was given a book of coupons, with which he could buy a newspaper from any newsboy or at any stand in the city. A nickel for a newspaper is a small item of course, but I am only telling you this to show to what length those Salt Lakeers went to do the honors."

"In Salt Lake we stayed at the Windsor, and it was four days and nights of entertainment all the time. We had hardly brushed up from the trip before we were whisked away to Fort Douglas, where we were treated to the finest military drill that many of us had ever seen, and it was followed by a concert by the post band, that was, if possible, finer than the one at Salt Lake."

"That night it was a swell reception at the Commercial club, and the way those Salt Lake people turned out was astounding. Mormon and Gentile, without thought of distinction, the best people of the city, ladies and gentlemen by the hundreds. Why, they really seemed as if they had no other thought than to make us feel that we were long lost friends and deserving of a welcome that would outshine the returning prodigal."

"Tuesday morning found us headed for Birmingham and the United States smelter, and at the latter place each of us was given a souvenir, a small ingot of copper, while at Birmingham, the mine had shut down, but the laborers of that district, running thousands of feet into the mountains, were brilliantly lighted by electricity, and their miners had not only decorated their towers with flags and bunting, but had stretched for miles and miles a narrow canyon, but every one of them was off duty for no other purpose than to take us in hand, and show us through that great mountain of ore, where there are $200,000 in sight."

"That night, back in Salt Lake, we were entertained with a magnificent

CONCERT IN THE TABERNACLE.

concert in the Tabernacle, with a specially prepared program by that great choir, and their unexcelled organ, and there must have been not far from 10,000 people in attendance. Where-ever we went they came to welcome us.

"It was the same next day at Salt-air beach, where many of us enjoyed the most novel swim on record, and of course some of us know what a trip containing 10 per cent salt water like.

"This was followed by another banquet, with hundreds of our hosts there to participate, and it was here that Mr. Atwood hosted for San Bernardino. Indeed, San Bernardino was the first of the cities outside of Los Angeles to be recognized."

"On Thursday we were taken across some of the valley lands, the most beautiful I ever saw, to the private place of Simon Hamberger, and here again, even in a semi-private capacity, hospitality was without stint.

"I found that I ought not to stay longer and planned to start home Thursday night, but other members stayed over until Friday, and took the train to Ogden and across the far-famed Lucin cut-off across an arm of the lake, where for miles the Southern Pacific, or the Central Pacific line, crosses the lake to get away from a heavy grade over what is known as Promontory hill."

"Of course, everything we saw and heard pleased and delighted us, for it is a beautiful city and valley, but after all, it was the welcome that will be longest remembered. There may be other places in the world where they make a stranger feel as if everything in sight was for his special delectation, and every wish and want is anticipated, but the 300 southern Californians who followed the old Mormon trail to the city of the Saints this week will always remember Salt Lake as a synonym for hospitality."

"I tried to use tea in its stead, but found its effects even worse than those I suffered from coffee. Then for a long time I drank milk alone at my meals, but it never helped me physically, and at last it palled on me. A friend came to the rescue with the suggestion that I try Postum Coffee.

"I did so, only to find at first, that I didn't fancy it. But I had heard of so many persons who had been benefited by its use that I persevered, and when I had brewed right found it grateful in flavor and soothing and strengthening to my stomach. I can find no words to express my feeling of what I owe to Postum Food Coffee!"

"In every respect it has worked a wonderful improvement in the headaches, nervousness, the pains in my side and back, all the distressing symptoms yielded to the magic power of Postum. My brain seems able to share in the betterment of my physical condition; it seems keener, more alert and brighter. I am, in short, a better health now than I ever was before, and I am sure I owe it to the use of your Postum Food Coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.
