SOCIAL SOCIETY

Two weeks have witnessed the appreciable falling off in social functions, always noticeable during the Lenten time. No more affairs have been given, the most of the home parties being limited to a few guests. This diminution usually holds till after Easter, when there will be the accustomed revival in social affairs.

Conference week brings always its own cheerful spirit, with its thronging of new people in homes and streets, and the bustling attendant upon their advent. Though its motive is spiritual rather than anything else, conference brings with it always an atmosphere of social cheer, that is always welcome, and the semi-annual gatherings in the state's metropolis, bring pleasant anticipations to all classes.

Mrs. Alice Nibler entertained at dinner last night her decorations being in pink and white carnations, and covers laid for about a dozen. Afterward, she took her party to Saltair.

Mrs. Jack Taylor entertained at a bridge tea on Wednesday in honor of the Misses Taylor, the decorations being in white and pink, and five tables played. Mrs. Dana McCreedy was prize winner and assisting the hostess were Mrs. George H. Smith and Mrs. Abby D. Cleveland.
