What we would especially call atten-tion to in this sad yet truthful picture, is the irresistible evidence which it affords that the cultivation of the intellect does not idvolve the improvement of the moral nature. The most intellectual of modern nations is the most beastly in its vices, and the most shameless in its beastliness. In this picture of France we are enabled to realize how it was that 'the world by wisdom knew not Ged," that Greece Grant Duff, M. P., in a speech last night at Elgin, advocated persoverance and Rome, in their highest state of civity the commercial policy of the late lilization, could not form a conception lilzation, could not form a conception of such a system of morality as the Bible, and we recognize more strongly than ever that "the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men,"—Balti-more Episcopal Methodist.
