AMUSEMENTS.

Mrs. Leslie Carter—Mrs. Leslie Carter begins her week's engagement tonight at the Salt Lake Theater in Edward Peple's new play "Vesta Home." This play recently scored a great success when it was first produced. It is of modern New York life, and the author is said to have drawn his characters with strength and clearness. An admirable company is promised to assist Mrs. Carter, and her stage production can be relied upon as being elaborate and consistent.

RAILROAD NEWS

MEETINGS THIS WEEK.

Many Important Sessions to be Held Beginning Tomorrow.

The important annual railroad meetings of the year begin tomorrow. The stockholders of the Union Pacific meet at 10 a.m. on Friday, Nov. 13, at the Union Pacific Land Company offices at 11 a.m., the Union Pacific, Atlantic and Pacific Fruit Express companies at noon. All are in the private offices of General Manager Bancroft of the Short Line. The annual stockholders' meeting of the Oregon Short Line comes at noon on Monday.

There is some speculation from unauthorized sources as to the probability of Edwin Hawley having a hand in the coming meetings. But local Harriman officials laugh at this, remarking there is as much to it as to the recent losing loop on the alleged purchase of the Saltair road and resort by the Harriman interests. Hawley once held an official position on the Southern Pacific, but he is now and never was considered a railroad captain of the first magnitude.

The remaining three-fourths are about 175 cases reported during the outbreak have been generally distributed throughout the city, no locality being exempt.

There are two existing conditions in Salt Lake City which are a constant menace to the public health. They are responsible for the usual prevalence of typhoid fever and, as before stated, are undoubtedly the cause of that portion of the present epidemic not due to the infected dairies and the water supply perfect. Incidentally, besides insuring against dangerous impurities, it would prevent the entrance of mud which circulated in the city waters and polluted the food eaten, to the great enjoyment of the people. At the present time all water used for culinary purposes should be boiled.

The disposal of sewage in those portions of the city not supplied by the sewer system should receive prompt attention, and there is imperative need for the removal of all of the debris which, as before stated, are largely responsible for the typhoid epidemic.

The need for the enforcement of the precautionary measures described is especially imperative in consequence of the epidemic. Much undisinfected sewage has without doubt been deposited in the surface receptacles under consideration in spite of the efforts of those who have been engaged in the work, and the result has been an unexpected case of the disease. Many epidemics have in this manner originated in dairies and they are otherwise very un sanitary.

Stamps should be taken to cause the covering with lime of the contents of all such places, and wherever they should be maintained under strict regulations, subject to periodical inspection. They should be so constructed as to exclude flies from their contents, and frequently disinfected.

From the standpoint of money cost alone, the prevention of typhoid fever has demonstrated that it is far more economical to spend any expense or pains necessary to avoid its occurrence. It would be demonstrated that real estate values shall suffer. It would be a much wiser and more honest policy to adopt such measures as shall warrant the claim that not only has nature abundantly furnished us the purse
