BREVITIES.

The "best illustrated paper out"—A bank note.

How to punish a hungry man—Drive a stake into him!

The man who was looking for a station in life found the police station.

It is better to encourage what is right than to punish what is wrong.

The Local of the Albany Knickerbocker commenced writing for that paper twenty-seven years ago.

Why do cabmen prefer tall ladies to short ones? Because the higher the fair the better they like it.

An Inspiring sight for a glazier—the early dawn, when it breaks into the windows.

The difference between Eugenie and the deposed Queen of Spain is, one is a belle on a throne, and the other Isabelle off.

An English poet calls a dance, "A fine, sweet earthquake, gently moved with the soft wind of whispering silks."

"Tell me," said one French child to another, "which you would rather lose, your father or your mother?"

"I don't know."

"I do, I would rather lose mamma, because papa makes all the money."

It is estimated that 250,000 pounds of sugar candy are daily consumed in the United States. At twenty cents a pound the expenditure would amount to more than $18,000,000 in a year.

"Don't you wish you were a goose?" asked a commercial man, who was in great perturbation of mind, of an unsympathizing friend near at hand. "No," responded the other, "you don't seem to be very happy."

The personnel of six suicides in one day in Paris is thus stated:

The victims were a lady of property; a girl of 18; a young man married only o few months and living most happily with his wife; a widow who could not pay her quarter's rent; a man aged 42, cause unknown; a boy 11 years of age who was locked up in his bed-room for "being naughty."

The following naive lover's promise was offered as an irrisistible temptati on to the finally given inamorata:

"I like you," said the girl to her suitor; "but I can't leave home. I am a widow's only darling; no husband can equal my parent in kindness."

"She is kind," pleaded the wooer; "but be my wife, we will live together, and see if I do not beat your mother."

A gentleman, it is said, had a board put on one part of his land, on which wns written, "I will give this field to any one who is really contented." And when an applicant came he always said, "Are you contented?" The general reply was, "I am." "Then," rejoined the gentleman, "what do you want with my field?"

An interesting story is given in the London Revival of the Sunday preaching of an English woman, on the shores of Lago Maggiore, to some of her Italian sisters. It is said that the dark eyes of the peasant women glistened with tears, while she spoke to them of a free salvation and a present Saviour.

The prayer which Socrates taught his disciple Alcibiades deserves a place in the devotions of every Christian:

"That he should beseech the Supreme God to give him what was good for him, though he should not ask it, and to withhold from him whatever would be hurtful, though he should be so foolish as to ask for it."

A romantic pair in Pennsylvania were blessed with a number of daughters. The eldest was called Caro-line, the second Made-line, the third Eva-line, the fourth Evange-line; when lo! the fifth made her appearance, and no name could be found with the desired termination. Determined, however, "to fight it out on that line, if it took all summer." the parents at last pounced upon a name very popular in the neighborhood, and forthwith the baby was named Crino-line.

Among the natives of Australia, if any person die, the survivors will never speak his name afterward. Some think the evil spirit which killed him will kill any one who repeats his name. This causes a constant change in the language, as has been observed by Prof. Max Muller in reference to some other Australasian tribes. Thus, if a man bearing the name of "Water," dies they will invent a new name for water. A Moravian missionary says that, having once, at a service among the blacks, give out a hymn beginning "Jesus, God's and David's Son, he was surprised that scarcely any one joined in the singing, quite contrary to their general custom, as they delight in music. But subsequently he learned that a boy named David had lately died, and they would not pronounce his name.

In the old stage coach days, an Irishman was traveling in New England. Arriving late at the town where they were to spend the night, Pat discovered to his dismay, that his only chance for sleep was to share the couch of a colored brother. The natural repugance of his race made him loth to accept the situation, but, being very tired, he submitted with as good a grace as possible. In the night some mischievous boys blackened his face. In the morning, fifteen miles had to be traveled before breakfast. Our Celtic friend was awakened just in time to spring into the carriage as it was moving off. At their stopping place he found no convenience for washing. Stepping up to a looking glass to arrange his hair, he started back in horror, exclaiming, "Be Jabers, you've woke that dirty nagur, and left me fifteen miles behint."
