Every member of the old and new board was present, except Simon Bamberger, vice president of the former board, who was out of the city. J. FRANK HUNT, Speaker of the Lower House of the Idaho Legislature.

HIS BODY LAID IN THE TOMB.

Remains of Instructor James Larsen Tenderly Consigned to The Silent Grave—Words of Praise From Associates And Fellow Teachers.

Bishop Barton spoke of the sadness of the occasion from a human standpoint. Brother Larsen, he said, had been an active and earnest worker in the nineteenth ward, especially in the Sunday school, where his demise will be felt as a great loss, as he was an able and beloved teacher.

President J. H. Paul said he had known Brother Larsen intimately for some time, and spoke in the highest terms of his strength and reliability as a member of the corps of teachers. The speaker emphasized the nobility of Brother Larsen's character and his untiring and heroic determination to gain an education, even late in life. He said that the noble character of the deceased was a source of inspiration to all students, teachers, relatives and friends, will miss him greatly.

Dr. J. M. Tanner spoke of the serious lesson taught by death. What is said of us after death is of but little import compared with what will be said to us by the Great Judge of all. The speaker exhorted the young people to ponder upon the questions of life and death, early in life, before compelled to do so by personal sorrows and bereavements.

President Angus M. Cannon said he had known Brother Larsen for many years, and he had been a member of the corps of teachers. The speaker emphasized the nobility of Brother Larsen's character and his untiring and heroic determination to gain an education, even late in life. He said that the noble character of the deceased was a source of inspiration to all students, teachers, relatives and friends, will miss him greatly.

Circulars to that effect will be shortly issued. Mr. Tipton is no stranger to the duties of purchasing agent as he held a similar position under the old Palmer-Dodge administration on the Rio Grande Western.
