BASKIN AND BAYONETS AND

BLOOD. WHAT a shocking subject! What an alarming alliteration! What a terrible trinity! Yet it is one of terrible trinity! Yet it is one of the gentleman's own causing, or most people, especially in this com-munity, would never have thought of much a thing. When it is found to be a preferred. Good of such a thing. When it is forced friends-I use the term advisedly, upon them, however, where is since in manifold ways I have, their choice, and how can they help it? The speaker named, at the late mass meeting of the malcontents, prophesied that the Utah question would be settled by "appriate legislation," or by bayonets and blood.

There are four things in which we cannot exactly concur with the beautiful theatre, 1 you may find only that which will please you speaker-firstly, that there is any and nothing that annoys." Utah question that needs settling by bayonets and blood; secondly, that there is any Utah question that needs settling by such "appro-priate legislation as the speaker meant; thirdly, that there is any Utah question at all of such dread-ful sort as the speaker indicated; is the slightest necessity of or pro-priety in the speaker aspiring to the title of Baskin the prophet. Only bench and the bar and the public generally asking, "Is Baskin also among the prophet?" Perfectly preposterous. If Baskin wishes to bathe or bask in blood, it is desirable that he do that needs settling by such "appro-

For a time these streets of this city or the valleys of this Territory for the theatre of his gory gymnastics. If the gentleman has an unconquerable liking for such things, why did he not go down south in the time of the civil war? Then and there he could have indulged his sanguinary soul in bayonets and blood to his heart's content. But here, in this most peaceful Territory, among our most peaceful, order-loving, law-abiding citizens, such repulsive proceedings would be entirely place, entirely out of character, and any one who war? Then and there he could peaceful, order-loving, law-abiding citizens, such repulsive proceedings would be entirely place, entirely out of character, and any one who could seriously suggest such things must have a pitiably poor percep-tion of poetic propriety or drama-tic unity. Human nature instinctively re-volts from the idea of abedding blood, even of animals, much more of human beings, and again much more of peaceably disposed people, malapropos, then, for a rabid, unregenerate gentleman to stand up and forebode wishfully the accomplishing of his wicked ends by bayonet and blood!
