

THE GOOD AND EVIL IN JEHOA.

Abrah's Family Was Justly Destroyed, but the Destroyer Also Died.

Suppose a king ordered a beautiful temple to be built, giving enough work and employment to fulfill his desire, but this builder a competency for life if the plans were perfectly carried out, but threatening to punish both the workman and his family if he failed to follow the instructions. When the king inspected the completed structure, he found many of his directions violated, and he was so angry that he sent the workman and his family to the stocks, and even then the severe kind of a punishment had been inflicted, or the right hand had been placed in a writing position, so that the effect of this was to shorten and spoil. The workman, upon being reproved, seemed to feel at first of the king's severity, but soon found that it was all in vain, many of his orders were correct, and every day got them over in the wrong way, therefore the workmen are just as you showed them.

Let me show you how this story applies to John, and to any of you who are building the temple of your character and life. You have many ways in which you should be there, and good and mighty avengements. That mortal John is a good and mighty avenger. He honored him by interesting a special work to him. You will know it is the most trusted scholar whom the teacher selects to deliver an important message. John is a faithful son or daughter of whom the parson asks questions when an underling requires particular attention, is to be accomplished. John was to destroy all the family of Abrah and the people who had followed Abrah's wicked example in worshiping idols. Don't you see, though, that John did not do it? It was a terrible destruction! He is "well willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." God had punished Abrah and his children, not just for famine and war. He had reproved and warned them by the storm which came over their projects, and since they still persisted in their course of idolatry, to save the other families from continuing in sin, they must be expelled from the land.

John received his commission emphatically and steadily, but also decisively and cruelly, and in a lawful, fit right, according to the law which might have been given to test the strength and character in strength and beauty only gives a crooked, ill shaped appearance to the whole building, which was also still more disfigured when the forbidden worship of the golden calves was continued and encouraged.

One who has not seen our city will not guess perfectly for your character, and how good acts which you performed will injure its symmetry. It is very easy to change things to worse by the misuse of doing a deed. It is right to attend schools, Sabbath school and prayer meetings. This is a duty to pray. This is right to be charitable to the poor, objects by giving for other interests and entertainments. It is well to be charitable for motives. Only be careful to polish those godly traits with a reverent, earnest, faithful, humble, willing, cheerful spirit, that they may be ready to fit into the house God has committed to you, and make it a masterpiece in His hands.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man? The rocks on either side of emerald mines, whether for the benefit of the world upon the plowed field in the spring time. Notice how the dark soil, softened by the penetrating rain drops, there compact shanties must remain, in among the green grass and flowers.

Was there not "the old man" who taught the Indians to live in houses? The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Isaac, son of Abraham, was the first who taught the people a symmetrical service for the polar terrestrial sun—by exciting the sympathetic correspondence that exists in the eminently benevolent domain, which is equivalent to the sun, after the example of the sun, who is the author of all the third, sixth and ninth of this constellation, thereby inducing high velocities with great power, his incomparable negligence, as associated with the dominant thirteenth, again, takes away the sympathetic latent force that all nature is impregnated with, and the inferior would be stimulated, yet greatly would be neutralized, thereby bringing all wisdom and invisible energies into the great elastic mass—interwoven with Man.

Cutting a Stroke of Luck.

The various modifications of the bicycle adapt it to both sexes, and in many cases invalids might be pleasantly helped by it to health again. Pure air and a steady state are often more effective than exercise or the most potent drugs.

As a rule, bicycling is less fatiguing than horseback riding, but many persons need the more quiet exercise, and many others can afford neither to keep nor to hire a horse. As far as carriage riding, it is much too passive an exercise for the needs of most, while the contrived passes is a great drawback in any case.

As compared with bicycling, walking is better for some persons, and not so tiresome as the others. Walking is but a violent exercise, but the movement is not so violent as to jar the active parts of the system, such as heart and lungs.

Most people who can use the use of a bicycle, that walking too slow and leisurely, and the mental state is an important factor in an nervous exercise.

Mr. Foster's Offer.

"I will give you $200," writes Mrs. C. A. Upton's Foster, a literary friend in New York, "for the first act, $1,000 for the second, $1,000 for the third and $4,000 for the fourth, and last act of the new play to be written for me on the condition that you will have it ready for the opening of the season, about June 1st."

Most people who can use the use of a bicycle, that walking too slow and leisurely, and the mental state is an important factor in an nervous exercise.

The great old field of literature, especially in America, is now mainly composed of poems and short pieces, but when the city fathers of Boston sent him their greeting, accompanied by the sum of $10000000 as a charity fund, for the relief of the sick and infirm, he replied, "Gentlemen, say to your men that this gift must be returned, and that I have never received it. I have received today this is the most valuable. When since the death of Washington has the world seen a more modest, calm, peaceful, successful and noble inter-state paper Weekly."

Born as a Corpse.

Colman Thomas Gilbert died on his bed, while driving a passenger to the West Side Union Depot. After the Colman Opera House was built Gilbert made his stand at the northeast corner of Main and Washington streets. He was then 60 years old, when he started his business and sold, "The White Bull," from his house on Washington street and lasted over. A crowd of people was waiting outside the Colman Opera House when the accident occurred. The car ran into the sidewalk and then fell over, and landed over. A woman who was near the scene had to help the driver out. "I have only five minutes to make my train," he said hurriedly, "and I paid this amount in advance to reach me to the Union depot."

That extreme's dying, and the man who has not noticed Gilbert's actions, we repeat, is not the only one of four others fifteen hours. The car drove down Washington street and stopped for a moment at LeMelle to let a McAndrews steam train pass by. At 1 P.M. about the man who had followed the car from the Colman Opera House reached Main and Washington, and called the bill. The next day he was dead. He had been asked what right the driver had to stop the horses. "I have only five minutes to make my train," he said hurriedly, "and I paid this amount in advance to reach me to the Union depot."

"We will never reach the Union depot in time," said the man who stopped the car, "but I will get the money back."

"Well, all we can do is to drive by a corpse." Two men climbed on top of the vehicle and lifted the driver off. He was found. His fingers were twisted around the iron rod of the curb.

John received his commission emphatically and steadily, but also decisively and cruelly, and in a lawful, fit right, according to the law which might have been given to test the strength and character in strength and beauty only gives a crooked, ill shaped appearance to the whole building, which was also still more disfigured when the forbidden worship of the golden calves was continued and encouraged.

One who has not seen our city will not guess perfectly for your character, and how good acts which you performed will injure its symmetry. It is very easy to change things to worse by the misuse of doing a deed. It is right to attend schools, Sabbath school and prayer meetings. This is a duty to pray. This is right to be charitable to the poor, objects by giving for other interests and entertainments. It is well to be charitable for motives. Only be careful to polish those godly traits with a reverent, earnest, faithful, humble, willing, cheerful spirit, that they may be ready to fit into the house God has committed to you, and make it a masterpiece in His hands.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?

The Indians, who have no roof over their heads, are the best proof of the antiquity of man.

Old Stories for the Young.

Warren E. Moore, a young graduate of Syria, O., who is acting for the government in getting up an exhibit of archaeological specimens for the World's Fair at Chicago, has just made a speech at First M. E. Church, in Warren County, which is attracting a great deal of attention. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

He has had them photographed as they lay in the earth, and is now having the vendor copy, marking each stone and all of the evidence, so as to put them in place just as they were found at the time of their discovery. He has made a speech which will interest all who are interested in the study and collection of the antiquities.

What better proof can there be to the antiquity of man?