Mr. Spooler urged that in matters where Congress had an absolute right to information in the possession of the executive, it had always been customary to direct a cabinet officer to fur-nish it. In matters where it had not nish it. In matters where it had not this right, and in which there was some doubt about the advisability of pub-licity, Congress usually made a request on the president if it desired the in-formation, with the understanding that it should be furnished, "if not incom-patible with the public interest." This view was supported also by Mr. For-aker, while Mr. Lodge quoted prece-dents to the contrary. Mr. Carter observed that it "had been alleged and not denied" that the troops in question had committed mur-der in Texas. This brought Mr. For-aker is his feet with an emphatic dis-claimer.

serted Mr. Foraker. Mr. Tillman interrupted to say that he had read in the morning papers "an alleged report" from the secretary of war, in which that official "had al-leged" that there was a disturbance, and that 10 or 20 of the troops had "shot up the town of Brownsville." Mr. Teache here becodered a printed conv "shot up the town of Brownsville." Mr. Foraker here produced a printed copy of testimony in the case, which he had obtained at the war department, ex-tracts of which he read to show, as he said, that it was "unsatisfactory, in-complete and of a flimsy character." Mr. Culberson took the opposite view of the testimony, but both agreed that with the "unsatisfactory informa-tion," it was useless to discuss the case.

Mr. Penrose said he had introduced his resolution in the interest of a large negro constituency in Pennsylvania, and had addressed it to the president because the action had been by the president, and he regarded it as a matter of courtesy to ask him for the information.

He also developed a quickness of apprehension and readiness to study and is now considered a model pupil.

TO PREVENT OVERCROWDING IN CHICAGO STREETCARS.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—Relief from the dan-gerous overcrowding of elevated trains is believed to be in sight as the result of plans made yesterday at a confer-ence between Mayor Dunne and, the presidents of the roads. SILVER PURCHASES.

Washington, Dec. 6.-The govern-ment today resumed the purchase of silver, accepting bids for 2,000 ounces silver, accepting bids for 2,000 ounces at 68,669 cents per fine ounce. This is more than 3½ cents an ounce lower than the offerings which were made at the time purchases were suspend-ed nearly four weeks ago. The fact that the large and increasing public demand for subsidiary coins, which could not be met without additional purchases, are the controlling rea-sons given by the treasury officials for the resumption. It is said by the treasury officials that purchases will continue for an indefinite time the amount to depend largely upon the prices asked.
