Information reached the sheriff's office that the safe in the office of H. Attwood, lumber merchant, at Murray, was burglarized late last night or during the early hours of this morning. Entrance was effected through the window. By an unfortunate omission on the part of the clerk the safe was left unlocked, and therefore all the thief had to do was to help himself to the contents and then quickly clear off. This he did. As a consequence there are missing, among other things, a petit juror's certificate (Third district court, February term, 1894) in favor of E. C. Boyle for $52.80, three orders on Bennion's flour mill at Taylorsville—two for $10 each and one for $20; and $15 in titling orders.

There is no clue to the burglar, and Sheriff McQueen does not have much hope now of catching him.

The Laboring Men's Association of America filed articles of incorporation with County Clerk Meloy Thursday morning. The object, as set forth in the papers, is to furnish employment for its members, and conduct "a general co-operative help association."

The capital stock is placed at $10,000, divided into 10,000 shares of the par value of $1 each. The stock taken is to be non-transferable except as from members back to the association.

All the incorporators reside in Salt Lake, and are as follows: J. B. Rawlings, Wm. Shaw, J. W. Sadler, O. Suter, H. Seal, Isaac Martin, John Latimer, Wm. Crim, Frank Halliday, Geo. H. Spry, Samuel Bates "and others"—one share each.

J. B. Rawlings will be president, Samuel Bates and Wm. McBrown vice presidents, and Wm. Holmes treasurer, with Hyrum R. Elton as secretary.

Undertaker Joseph E. Taylor forwarded to Grantsville the body of Elmer B. W. Clark, the eighteen-year-old son of Joshua R. Clark, a well known resident of Tooele county. The deceased has been suffering for some time from an internal abscess, and was brought to the hospital in this city to receive attention. It was decided that a surgical operation was the only chance of saving his life, and though even this expedient was doubtful of success it was resorted to as a necessity. The operation was performed on Thursday, the 14th inst., but was unavailing, and the young man never rallied. The primary cause of death was empyema.

The deceased was the first to pass away of a family of ten children. He was an estimable young man, and the bereaved family have the sympathy of a host of friends in the affliction which has come upon them in the departure of a beloved member of their flock.

The Wasatch Mineral Springs company has instituted legal proceedings in the Third district court against Salt Lake City.

The plaintiffs set forth that they are the owners of a certain mineral spring, situated on lots 1, 2 and 14, Lake View subdivision, that the value of the spring consists in its sale as a mineral water in the bottling and sale of which the company is now engaged, and for that purpose its sale value consists in being pure and clean. That the defendants own land adjoining, within sixteen rods of the spring; that they, in the latter part of 1892, placed a large quantity of decayed tar, creosote oil, debris, filth and other things on their land, that it soaked through the soil, and polluted the spring and ruined and destroyed the business of the plaintiffs for more than six months. Plaintiffs say they removed the nuisance at an expense of $1,000, and allege that they sustained damages to their business to the amount of $9,000. Wherefore judgment for $10,000 is demanded.

Walter Willis, of Paradise, was brought to Logan on Saturday, suffering from the effects of a scorpion's sting, received while turning over a rock at the mouth of Paradise canyon. The poisonous insect drove its sting between the third and little fingers of one of Mr. Willis' hands so firmly that it took quite a pull to detach it. It is described by an eyewitness of the act as having been fully three inches in length. Mr. Willis hastened home, and after swallowing one drink of whiskey was hastily driven to Logan. As several hours had elapsed the poison had penetrated his system and his condition was quite dangerous. Dr. Ormsby cut the hand and cleansed it and gave the patient quantities of liquor. In spite of the stimulation Willis' pulse continued falling and the heart's action became feeble; his arm swelled to immense proportions and the veins stood out in ridges. A rash also broke out on him. Hypodermic injections of restoratives were resorted to, and the symptoms became less alarming. He was not entirely out of danger when taken home; but his attendants were supplied with stimulants and full directions for their use.

Hon. Albion B. Emery, Speaker of the last Territorial Legislature of Utah, is dead. It will be remembered that his health was not the best during the period he presided over that body. In fact, his illness was of long standing. Serious developments did not, however, present themselves until a few months ago.

The first announcement of the death of Mr. Emery received in this city, was conveyed by the following telegram to Chris Diehl from Charles E. Stanton, who has been at the bedside of the deceased during the whole of his illness in San Francisco:

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.,

June 13th, 7 a.m.

Al. passed away this morning. Leave for Salt Lake Thursday afternoon.

reAt 10 o'clock the following was also received by Mr. Diehl:

Leave here Thursday evening. Have Skewes meet train Saturday morning. Funeral Sunday afternoon; body can lie in state in Masonic Hall until then. Notify papers and fraternity.

C. E. STANTON.

Mr. Emery was a native of Maine and about 55 years of age. He was a resident of Park City, Utah, for many years, and his home was at that place at the time of his death. He leaves a wife and an adopted daughter and a host of warm friends to mourn his departure from mortality. He was engaged principally in mining business. In politics he was an aggressive and ardent Republican.

About 3 o'clock Friday afternoon an accident occurred on Ninth East street, between Eleventh and Twelfth South streets, which may cost Raymond Riley, a seven-year-old boy, his life. Ninth East is the route taken by those engaged in hauling lime rock from Emigration canyon to the Germania smelter. At the hour stated one of the teams occupied in hauling was passing the residence of Mr. Riley. The driver had a six-horse team, which engaged his attention, and two wagon loads of rock, the second wagon being coupled close to the first. As he was passing another team, the driver heard a child cry out, and looking back saw a little boy between the wheels of his trail wagon.

The team was stopped quickly, and the child removed from his dreadful position, but already he had received injuries that are likely to prove fatal. The boy was Raymond Riley, and he had run out and attempted to climb on the front of the trail wagon. In doing so he had slipped and fallen in the way of the front wheel, which passed over his left hand, injuring it so that two fingers had to be amputated, and then going over one leg between the knee and thigh. There was more than two tons of rock on the wagon, and the wheel had fairly crushed the limb.

Dr. Stephen Richards was called in and did what he could for the sufferer. At first it was thought that the leg should be amputated, but after consideration it was decided that the limb could be set and this was done. The accident is of such a severe nature, however, that it is extremely doubtful whether the boy can survive.

LOGAN, June 14.

On Tuesday evening Mr. Conrad Schaub, formerly city engineer, was out riding in his cart, and when at a point near Mr. Lang's residence on the Island, he either fell or was thrown out. His cart was found about two blocks further along. Whether his horse had run away or not cannot be determined. When Mr. Schaub was found he was unconscious, and remained in that condition until yesterday afternoon, when he died.

Yesterday morning a boy thirteen years of age, Thomas Hendry, met with a serious accident about three miles south of Wellsville. He was riding horseback, when his horse stumbled and fell, throwing him head downward on a patch of gravel. He was brought to Logan, when it was found that his injuries were very serious. A scalp wound, reaching from the bridge of his nose and extending upward into his hair, then downward to his left ear, was found, the gash being fully ten inches in length. The skull was exposed for nearly half its area, the flesh hanging down over his eye. Both eyeballs were nearly severed and the eye itself was so badly injured that the loss of sight is imminent. Fortunately the skull was not fractured, and the boy will recover.

On Monday evening a little son of John L. Ballif fell from the loft of his barn, alighting on a manger underneath. Several teeth were loosened and a gash was cut in his chin, exposing the jaw bone for about two inches. He received prompt attention and is now able to be out again.
