THE FAIR.

ON Monday the Territorial Fair will be opened in the City Market building and the grounds adjoining it and the Deseret Museum. The Board of Directors of the Deseret Agricultural and Manufacturing Society have spared no effort to make the Fair interesting and profitable to the public. The display will be the best ever presented.

The incentive exhibition has been much enhanced by the numerous special prizes offered by enterprising citizens in addition to the regular premiums of the Society. Moreover, the Society has engaged in erecting stands and stalls and frames for the articles to be exhibited, the electric light shown off brilliantly in the grounds last evening, and on Monday it is expected that everything will be in readiness for visitors.

The Fair should receive general public patronage. It will be a sight well worth inspection by old and young, ladies and gentlemen. The skill, labor, and ingenuity of the Territory will there find expression and competition will have ample opportunities. It would be well for the students and teachers of Sunday Schools to make arrangements for their scholars to pay a visit to the Fair. The day school ought to do the same. The children should have the benefit of the instruction which the Fair will impart to all reflecting minds, and of the incentive it will give to thought and emulation. At any rate announcements should be made in the schools so that all the children may be aware of the exhibition.

The price of admission is placed at twenty-five cents for adults and ten cents for children, which will include access to the Museum, which alone is worth more than the usual fee required. It is to be hoped that the opening day will be well patronized and that the Fair of 1931 will prove, as anticipated, the finest and most successful ever witnessed in the Territory.

AN ATROCIOUS FALSEHOOD.

WHILE the newspapers generally give the facts in relation to the "Mormon" memorial services in honor of President Garfield, it remains for the eminently pious religious journals to continue their work of falsification and to distinguish themselves for shameful calumny. The following from the Watchman, the Boston organ of New England orthodoxy, is about the boldest piece of unadorned and unadorned lying that we have seen for some time:

"It is an interesting fact that on the day set apart for prayer for the President, the Deseret News, organ of the Mormons, declared that the 'Praying Circle' of the Mormon Church was engaged in continual supplications for the death of President Garfield."

If the Watchman can produce anything of the kind as an assertion or admission of the Deseret News, either on the day named, or at any other time, we will agree to regard the Boston religious paper with some degree of respect. As it is, it holds it up to the gaze of the public as a willful and despicable lie, bearing false witness against its neighbor without the slightest reason or excuse for its malicious slander. The files of the Deseret News are open to all agents or supporters of the Watchman to search for the statement which it alleges appeared in our columns, but which was manifestly a fabrication in relation to the vile intent of deceiving the public and arousing prejudice against a body of worshippers who do not agree in creed with the editors of the Watchman. The devil himself could not invent a more atrocious untruth than the sentence we have quoted from that pharisaical sheet.

TRIAL FOR HERESY.

MANY public journals take a very unsound position on the heresy trials which have not been infrequent of late. In several denominations cases of expulsion of preachers have occurred for teaching doctrines contrary to the articles of faith or written discipline of the church to which they belonged. The expelled ministers generally meet with journalistic sympathy, while the church officials who investigated the charges are exposed to newspaper criticism and treated to virulent language and condemnatory in tone and often violent in spirit. So with the recent case in San Francisco, of a charge against a teacher in a Presbyterian Bible class. The lady was not a member of the church, yet she taught the class and it was proven that her instructions were in opposition to Presbyterian doctrine and in action in the case has brought forth a storm of newspaper investigation and the gentlemen who brought the charge and the body which tried it are denounced as intolerant, with many other derogative of a similar character.

All this is very inconsistent and shows lack of sound judgment. No minister or teacher of any denomination, whether he be a Unitarian, a Baptist, a Methodist, or a Presbyterian, should be allowed to remain in a seat with which he is not in accord, and cannot reasonably complain if that body refuses to acknowledge him as one of its authorized exponents. If these societies held no settled opinions upon doctrine, it would be a different matter. But they do hold certain tenets as distinctive features of their faith, many of which are very far from acceptable. It would, therefore, be very poor policy on their part to followship as ministers men who do not believe in those tenets and teach ideas in antagonism to theirs.

error in the first place was in placing a Bible class in a denominational school under the direction of a non-member. The lady was very "liberal" in her views of religious matters, and was not by any means an orthodox Presbyterian. If the doctrine of that church are considered of any value, its authorities ought to see that neither children nor adults are taught under its auspices ideas that are hostile to its established creed. But having made a mistake in this case, there was no necessity to continue the error and insist that church could not fail to see was heresy because the lady who entertained and taught it was respectable, amiable, circum-spect and blameless in character. The outcry raised against its action is therefore unjustified, and in fact foolish in the extreme.

Every religious body has the right to communicate such members or officers as become discordant with its distinctive tenets and discipline. The fact of membership is an acknowledgment of acceptance of its doctrines and compliance with its government. To complain, therefore, of expulsion when the very essence of membership is gone, is childish and unreasonable, and those public journals that echo the silly cry are inconsistent and unliking.

If a popular preacher breaks away from the tenets of his church and considers his church has held his mind and speech, and either progresses or retrogrades from its established forms and tenets, let him leave that church like a man, and not play the martyr because it does not choose to endorse his ideas or follow him into what it considers his vagaries and heresies. And let the papers that comment on the case sustain the independence of thought, but not the independence of the church which is declining to lend its authority to its unauthorized expositions of private views and personal imaginings.

Liberty of thought and speech should be accorded to all and be maintained by all. But the very nature of religious organizations is such that being founded on a definite creed, they must require adherence to that creed as a condition of fellowship, and especially in their ministers who are authorized only to expound the doctrines which the body acknowledges as correct. If a man cannot find room enough in an organized society for his expanding mind there is space enough outside, but to seek within its limits to use the sanction of its authority for the promulgation of notions antagonistic to its declared doctrine and policy is, in our view, dishonest, unmanly, and to be deprecated by sensible journalists and a reasonable public.

The director of the mint purchased, to-day, two hundred and fifty thousand ounces of silver for Philadelphia and San Francisco. The Treasury has checks for $34,717,000 for the redemption of bonds, included in the previous calls which have only just been presented. There are in all over one million of bonds still outstanding, upon which interest has ceased. Some of these bonds should have been presented eleven years ago. Probably the Treasury will never succeed in redeeming some of them. It is estimated that the national banks hold six million of called silver and must reduce their holdings or replace them with other bonds December 24th.

Memorial Service.
MOUNT PLEASANT, SALT LAKE CITY, U.T., September 30, 1931.

Editorial Dearest News.

In honor of the late President, Garfield, the flag was flying at half mast in different parts of the city at an early hour in the morning of the 28th inst. All business establishments remained closed for the day, and quietude and solemnity reigned. The day was devoted to prayer and mourning by the people. Services were held in the Morning Temple at 9 o'clock, p.m., where the people assembled on a mass scale, and were addressed by Elder C. H. Wheeler, General Conference President. The speakers deeply deplored the spirit of violence and assassination which was abroad in the land, and to which our late President had fallen a victim. They expressed the deep sympathy felt by the entire community for the late President and his loved ones, and the irreparable loss sustained by the whole nation, who were now mourning the loss of one of its greatest and noblest sons.
