

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

The Advent of Lent and the "Terrible" Sacrifices it Entails—Misunderstanding of "The Resurrection"—Story of Tolstoi's Thrilling Play.

Special Correspondence.

New York, March 3.—At Proctor's Fifth Avenue theater on Broadway, next Sunday evening, Miss Lela Leigh gives a trial performance of her playlet, "The Butterfly and the Bee," the sketch written for her by Edward Elmer, the playwright, and for which she pays $1,000.

came into New York this week from his road tour, where he has been giving that week's vacation before going out again. He is staying at his mother's, Mrs. Vandergriest's on Eighty-second street.

Lent is again with us, and for many, it proves a most desirable event. It is a beautiful time of the year, and a lovely time to visit the different churches.

It is well to note that the members of the colony who have been afflicted with grippe so many weeks, are all on the road to recovery, most of them being able to be around.

At the Professional Woman's league last Monday, Mrs. Alphonse Kildier was made a member of that organization. Mrs. Kildier's husband is now playing the title role in O. U. Sean's play "Corintian."

A great deal of misunderstanding exists regarding the plot of "The Resurrection," the play in which Blanche Walsh and Joseph Hawthorn are now attracting so much attention.

religious or a Biblical drama. Nothing could be farther from the facts. Here is the story:

Dimitri Ivanovitch, who belongs to one of the titled families of Russia, since at the age of 15 has a romantic, though pure and innocent attachment for one of the dependents of the household, a young and beautiful girl, named Katusha, an orphan who has been adopted by his parents and reared more in the capacity of a companion than a servant.

Ten years later, after his retirement from the army, he is called for jury duty, the first case on the calendar being that of a dissolute woman named Maslova, who is charged with murder.

To his consternation and shame he recognizes in the accused the sweetheart of his youth. He had learned from his aunt's years since an account of her having fallen from grace; that she had been put out of the house and that subsequently she had given birth to a child.

even the utterance of which is regarded as profanity—brings his crime home to him with terrible force. He is struck to the very soul and realizes that it is he and not she who should be before the bar of justice, no matter what deed she had committed.

too late; why he did not publicly stand up for her in court; reminds him that he bought her, and that her price was a hundred rubles. He begs her forgiveness, admits that he is the guilty one, offers any reparation, even marriage, but she will not listen.

MILES TO REPORT HIS TRAVELS.

Major General Nelson A. Miles, head of the United States army, is preparing a lengthy report of his tour of the world, which will be officially presented to the secretary of war.

Boys don't care. They only think of today. It's the parents who must watch and worry. They know what exposure to the wet and cold means—tender throats, sore lungs, hard coughs.

During the nineteenth century London grew at nearly a constant rate from 800,000 people to 4,500,000—eight fold. New York grew more rapidly but less regularly, in general doubling in about 20 years.
