WHOLESALE MURDER OF JEWS.

OCCASIONAL reports for a year or two past, from the Turkish provinces of Roumania, have indicated that the Jewish inhabitants of those provinces have been treated, barbarously by their more numerous Christian co-residents. In reading these accounts one has been taken back to scenes in medieval European history, when to be a Jew was enough to ensure the worst possible treatment from the hands of all who had not the misfortune to be born one of the outcasts of Israel. In those days in England and on the continent of Europe, the Israelites were subjected to every species of indignity and outrage, and at times great numbers were put to the sword. Time and the advance of civilization modified this asperity of feeling towards the members of the Jewish race, and in many parts of the civilized world they now enjoy most of the rights, civil and religious, possessed by others. But the treatment they occasionally receive in some portions of Europe proves that the curse is not yet entirely removed.

It is not long since that intelligence was received by the wires that a ukase had been issued by the Czar banishing the Jewish residents from certain districts of the Russian empire. This, at the request of the Jews in this country, led to a remonstrance from President Grant. What effect that remonstrance has had, has not transpired; but it is to be hoped for the sake of the reputation of the Emperor Alexander, who has done so much to alleviate the condition of millions of his subjects, that a policy more in accordance with civilization and humanity will be pursued towards the Israelitish race in his dominions.

It is not in Russia, however, that the Jews at the present time are being treated with the greatest rigor, but in Roumania. A year or two ago, in those provinces, they were subjected to the most outrageous injustice and ill-treatment, not only on account of popular ill-feeling and prejudice, but by political enactment. This injustice seems to have reached a culminating point on Sunday last, for according to our dispatches of yesterday, on that blessed day, the day of rest, so venerated and honored by the Christian world, the Christian population of Roumania, by preconcerted arrangement, slaughtered one thousand men, women and children, simply because they were of the Jewish race. Such intelligence must fill professing Christians, everywhere, with horror, to think how their co-religionists have disgraced their profession; and if missionary societies, who are so anxious to convert savages from their barbarism, do not unite labor until they effect a reformation among these brutal, civilized savages of Roumania they will fail in performing a duty they owe to themselves and to the interest of humanity the world over.

The dispatches to-day, say that indignation meetings of the Israelites have been held in several cities of the East to protest against the cruelty practiced against their brethren by these Roumanian barbarians; they will also memorialize the Government authorities and the members of Congress to use their influence to prevent a recurrence of these shameful outrages in future.

This prompt action on the part of the Jews here will, it is to be hoped, be followed by a similar action on the part of all men of influence, both Jews and Christians, in Europe, that the inhumanity of the Roumanians may meet with such general condemnation as to render a repetition of their brutality impossible.

With any people persecuted on account of their religion, the people of Utah sympathize most deeply. They have endured to the full, the result of so-called Christian intolerance on that account; and hard as is the conduct of the civilized and Christian Roumanians, it is trifling when compared with what professed believers in the same system of religion in America have inflicted upon the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. With all the boasting of the civilization of the times, the heaven of barbarism is by no means extinct, either on this or the other side of the Atlantic, as wholesale murder and slaughter there, and special legislation for religion's sake here, amply, but unfortunately demonstrate.

Correspondence.

S. L. CITY, June 3rd, 1870.

Editor Deseret News:—Being on East Temple St., last night about ten o'clock, an alarm of fire was given, and hastening in the direction whence the alarm proceeded, I saw a flame filling the window of Z. C. M. Drug Store. It struck me that the lamp had burst by the ignition of its oil. Having on a heavy overcoat I thought that it could be used with effect in extinguishing the flame. Arriving at the spot I perceived that blankets were already in use. Just then the flame burst out again and it appeared to me that the window pane was broken (I think so still), and I made an effort to extinguish the flame by my coat, which broke the pane a little more. Mr. Jennings called for more blankets. I went into the store and called for more, and also for water to dip them in, as wet rugs or blankets are most effectual in extinguishing a fire of that kind. By this time the flame was put out.

I drop you this line in order to remove any incorrect opinion with regard to the way I used my coat, as some bystanders did not appear to understand the object.

The fire originated through the bursting of a bottle of alcohol. Mr. Jennings was the first to see it and made the alarm and called for blankets. Mr. Auerbach hurried up with blankets, by which the fire was fortunately extinguished. Mr. Jennings was certainly "the right man in the right place."

A CITIZEN.

THE LARGEST TANNERY IN THE WORLD.

Elk County, in Pennsylvania, has the largest tannery in the world. It is known as the "Wilcox Tannery," and was built three years ago. The proprietors own 22,000 acres of land on the Clarion River, all heavily covered with hemlock. The bark mills of the concern are in a building 45 by 100 feet, two stories high, and capable of grinding seventy-five cords of bark per day. These mills are driven by an eight-horse power engine, and the only fuel used is spent tan. The leaching house is 38 by 210 feet, and two stories high. It contains twelve leaches of immense size. The "sweat pit" is 70 by 90 feet, of stone. Seven hundred vats are now in use. The company makes nothing but sole leather, and of this the product is 120,000 sides per annum; though when the tannery shall be completed 200,000 will be turned out. The consumption of bark is 14,000 cords per year.

The company has erected twenty-seven tenant houses, and employs from 150 to 300 men, at wages ranging from $20 to $70 per month. The capital invested foots up to about $500,000; and nearly 15,000,000 feet of hemlock lumber is manufactured every year at the company's mills. The hides used are imported from South America. It will be scarcely credited that fifty tons of hair are collected and sold annually at this monster establishment. Among other "incidentals" are the "fleshings," and a hundred barrels of soap grease are obtained from them.

God has so made the sexes that women, like children, cling to the men; lean upon them as though they were superior in mind and body. They make them the suns of systems, and their children revolve around them. Men are gods, if they but knew it, and women burning incense at these shrines. Women, therefore, who have good minds and pure hearts, want men to lean upon. Think of them reverencing a drunkard, a liar, a fool or a libertine. If a man would have a woman to do him homage, he must be manly in every sense, a true gentleman, not after the Chesterfield school, but polite, because his heart is full of kindness to all; one who treats her with respect, even deference, because she is a woman; who never condescends to say silly things to her; who brings her up to his level, if his mind is above hers; who has no time to be frivolous with her. Always dignified in speech and act; who never spends too much upon her, never yields to temptation, even if she puts it in his way; ambitious to make his mark in the world, whether she encourages him or not; who is never too familiar with her to the extent of being an adopted brother or cousin; who is not over-careful about dress; always pleasant and considerate, but keeping his place of the man, the head, and never losing it. Such deportment, with noble principles, good mind, energy and industry, will win any woman in the world who is worth winning.
