EDITORIAL NOTES.

In the British Cabinet there are three fatal ailments—Sir William Harcourt, Sir Charles Dilke and Mr. Chamberlain. Labourers never drink, Parrell seldom, Gladstone moderately, Lord Derby a great deal.

The King of Siam, whose ambassadors are soon expected to arrive in Paris, is said to be a most extraordinary looking man. Korl is about twenty years of age, and the most remarkable fact concerning him is the insignificant length of his nails, each of which measures about half a yard. This deformity is considered by the Siamese as an attribute of sovereignty, and, of course, reduces the monarch to a state of absolute helplessness. He can do nothing for himself, and is obliged to have recourse in every instance to his aide-de-camp.

The Cincinnati Times-Star says: "The growing dissatisfaction among soldiers in the regular army is attributed by one officer to 'an intolerable burden of manual labor,' it is legally imposed upon the common soldier by shoulder strap duties in the service, and wholly without compensation. The provision of law which allows every soldier (except ordnance) detailed as artificer or laborer to receive extra pay is constantly violated. A rigid investigation would seem to be in order."

A new socialist community has been formed in Missouri. The society is to hold property and children in common, to dwell in a common home, and each one is to "refrain from abusive remarks." Such a socialist society was formed near half a century ago near Canton, Fulton County, in this State. One of the principals was Joseph Kaval, a well-to-do farmer. It was the Brook farm, of Illinois, with less literature, but more wealth and religion. But the thing would not work. The men laid the break up to the fault of the women, and the women said the men were to blame.

Dr. Charles C. Beatty, of St. Louis, Mo., has a peculiar method of disposing of his wealth. At first he prayerfully set apart one-tenth of his income for the cause of Christianity; but when the financial revolution of 1873 wrought widespread distress he resolved that one-fourth should go to religion and charity. After this, in view of the fact that, as he says in the written pledge found after his recent death, the Lord had blessed him peculiarly "beyond what he had ever expected or desired," he made a covenant never to allow the principal of his fortune to exceed $70,000, and that all above this should be given away. Accordingly, the value of his estate is $65,000, and the aggregate gifts amounted to $500,000.

The carriages of the fast train which is to run from Paris to St. Petersburg will be supplied with adjustable wheels which will enable them to travel on various gauges. From Paris to the Russian frontier the same gauge is used, but there it changes and at the frontier stations, Ryd Kuhn and Wirbelen, the wheels will have to be readjusted. Travelers will thus be able to go the whole distance without the inconvenience of having to change carriages. The speed of the train will be no less than attempted on the continent. It is to be 60 kilometers or 60 miles (without stoppage) an hour. It is announced that the train is to be "the American pattern," including kitchen, dining saloon, reading and drawing rooms, and all the other comfortable arrangements essential to modern traveling.

The tricks of pension agents show the instincts of thieves. They send broadcast through the country circulars to pensioners and others in which the laws are misquoted and the pensioner is betrayed into believing that he can either secure an increase or derive some benefit from making an application to the pension department. The agent then asks for some of the advance fees, which the applicant pays. An application of some sort is made and that is the last of it. The pension department is at work ferreting out these swindlers, to deprive them from practicing in the department. Persons who have received such circulars should send them to the commissioner of pensions, that the robbing of pensioners by a set of unprincipled agents may be promptly stopped.

A Chicago paper thus describes the effect on the street gamins of the appearance of "Buffalo Bill" in that town: "The small boy is abroad with his lance. Since the visit of 'Buffalo Bill' and his combination everything with a neck, animate and inanimate, is being choked with cords, and the streets on the west side are alive with boys with paper fringes on their pants and larvae more or less dead in their hands. Yesterday an elderly gentleman who owns a dog started from his residence with the cur at his heels, when a wild whoop and a shrill yell caused him to turn sharply about. A small-sized model of Buffalo Bill had thrown a lasso over his dog's head, and a band of juvenile warriors was dragging the brute to the rear. A chase began, and after a block had been traversed the gentleman rescued his pet; but the rage of the young braves was such that sticks and chunks of dirt were hurled at the owner's devoted head until he was compelled to seek safety in flight.

ANTICIPATED STIR.

SOME time in the beginning of next week an incident will occur that will set the country ablaze with mock excitement and able speculation. The symptoms, like some other inexplicable forms of disease, is periodical. The length of time elapsing between the spasms depends upon the dates on which the companies of Latter-day Saint immigrants land at Castle Garden. They are the cause of the malady, and the attacks are consequently confined between the months of May and November of each year. A company from Liverpool will reach New York in a few days, and an other convulsion may be expected as the result of its advent.

The occasion will doubtless, as usual, cause reporters, clergymen and political demagogues to brush away the cobwebs from their memories and rake up the recollection of all the old speculations for the utter or gradual demolition of "Mormonism," or cause them to take up the embers of their legends for unique panoplies.

In case the sensational telegraphers, newspapers, priests and politicians should need a little prompting we take occasion to remind them of the necessity of stopping the tide of "Mormon" immigration, to save the country from absolute ruin, that the 50,000,000 of people of this nation may no longer stand afar off and tremble at a handful of honest people. The people. The efficiency of the powder, shot, and sword doctrine, of which the meek and childlike Talmage is the leading expounder and supporter should not be lost to view. Governor Murray's scheme of disfranchisement for the purpose of making political places for hungry political hacks should be recollected. Then the advocates of flooding Utah with an influx of "Gentiles" should have some place in the formidable array of anti-"Mormon" physicians, as with their advent comes the concomitants of modern civilization—the dram shop, gambling house, and brothel. There are those also who have prescribed through the good offices and example of non-"Mormons," the millinery establishment and ladies' clothing store, and institutions to extensive householders.

So we might go on with a long, we might say interminable list of prescriptions which have been carefully formulated for the purpose of application to "Mormonism," to render it an extinct institution, but the few already enumerated will perhaps be enough to have ready for the arrival of the next company.

But, speaking seriously, why all the hubbub that is made at every ripple that appears on the surface of this community? Why is every little incident seized as a pretext upon which to base a great ado in reference to the people of Utah? It is something of which those who engage in it have reason to be heartily ashamed. There is evidently an attempt on foot, with an ulterior object at the end of it, to create a popular impression that, "if we let these people alone they will take away our place and nation." The position is so absurd that it is difficult to look at it seriously. The very admission of such an idea would be to logically admit also that there is in "Mormonism" and its adherents a strength, power and vitality that is superhuman, and in this great and powerful nation the most deplorable elements of imbecility and weakness.

We claim, may we insist, that the "Mormons" constitute a community that are in the nature of a preservative of national integrity. They are intensely honest, industrious, peaceful and patriotic. The very genius of their faith and practice is to uphold and sustain every constitutional principle. To do this they are willing to make much personal sacrifice, and would be an element of wealth in any country. Instead of being opposed and ill-treated they should be encouraged and fostered. The advice of the ancient philosopher in relation to Christianity in its early stages—net to fight against it lest it be found that battle was being done against God, would apply with considerable force in reference to the Latter-day Saints. The conclusion reached by the same authority—that if the system was from God it could not be successfully overthrown, but if it were not it would fall to pieces by reason of its own lack of the elements of strength, was logically correct, and has also a fine application in this instance.

In any event, all this fanning and fury in relation to the "Mormons" is "etate, flat and unprofitable," and highly disrespectful to those who appear so anxious to crush an apparently small and helpless community. It certainly looks as if magnanimity had died from a great many breasts on this subject, if it ever had a place there. When fanatical people give "Mormonism" and the "Mormons" the close scrutiny it deserves, prejudices that may have previously possessed their minds are speedily dispelled.

A CHANGE ON THE STAFF.

ON the 9th of the present month (October) Mr. John Nicholson, formerly city editor of the News, vacated that position, which was on the date named, assumed by Mr. O. F. Whitney. The gentleman first named, at the same time, took the position of associate editor on the staff of this paper. We make this statement for the reason that numerous persons unaware of the change and having communications to make to the local department, still enquire for Mr. Nicholson, instead of Mr. Whitney.

GOVERNORS OF TERRITORIES

THE following excellent article, giving a statement of the views of President Arthur on a question of vital interest to the Territories, is from the columns of the New York Times:

many predecessors of President Arthur. Nevertheless the old old way of sending to the Territories, as executive officers, disappointed and untrained politicians from out of States has been persevered in without variation. It is reasonable to suppose that the active and enterprising population of a new Territory would furnish at least one man competent to be Governor to see to it that the Territories were not mismanaged. The Governor of Arizona, New Hampshire has sent the illustrious Orson to Dakota; New York is responsible for Schuyler Crosby, of Montana, as well as for the Chief Justice (L. Bradford Prince) of New Mexico, Kentucky owns with pride Eli H. Murray, of Utah. The Governor of Washington Territory is W. H. Newell, ex-Congressman and ex-Governor of New Jersey, and Daniel A. Sheldon, ex-Congressman and ex-Governor of New Mexico. The Governor of Idaho and Wyoming are imported from the east, but are politicians of lesser note than those who have preceded them and are not credited to the States from which they were appointed.

A broken down and defeated politician seeks a Territory. He may make some money in the brisk speculation which is life in a new community, and he will be on hand early in case the Territory blooms into a full grown State with two Senators, a Representative in Congress, and a governor to elect. The late J. W. Nye, of Nevada, Governor and Senator, was one of the few lucky ones to profit by this sudden transformation of a Territory into its staple article. He was territorial Governor and one of the first Senators from the new State.

Governor Newell, of Washington Territory, is said to be unpopular with his people, and N. G. Ordway, sometime Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives, and now Chief Executive of Dakota, is cited as another shining example of a territorial Governor who is alternately detested and ridiculed by people whom he has been sent to govern. The Ordways and the Newells represent nothing but "the lame ducks" of politics. Territorial Governors, for the most part are men who have failed at home and are sent to govern distant corners, untried by way of deserting the plaudits of his fellow countrymen.—N. Y. Times.

London would be in ashes, he said, before long, unless England gave up Ireland. New developments might be expected at any moment, for it was now the purpose of the brotherhood to reduce England to submission.

General Sherman's Retirement.

WASHINGTON, 31.—A correspondence incident to the retirement of General Sherman, is published today. The General in addressing the Secretary of War, shows that while his legal term of service does not expire till February 28th, 1884, yet that season of year is not suited to the changes necessary. On his retirement he then says:

"I have long contemplated, anticipating the event some months in order to enable the President to make these changes at a more convenient season of the year, and to enable my successor to be in office before the assembling of the next Congress. I therefore request authority to transfer my command of the army to Lieutenant General Sheridan on the 1st of Nov., 1883, and that I be ordered to my home at St. Louis, there to await the date of my legal retirement, and as much as I will have for a long time much correspondence about the war of an unofficial nature, I also ask authority to have the time fixed for the first of Nov. I then complete all my official reports, and I believe I can surrender to my successor in good shape and condition, well provided in all respects, and with distribution for the best interests of the country. I am grateful that my physical and mental strength required by years, and am thankful for the liberal provision made by Congress for my declining years, which will enable me to respond to any call the President may make for my military service or judgment as long as I live.

Secretary Lincoln replies to the effect that the President has acceded to all the requests made in the General's letter, and accedes as follows:

The President directs me to express to you his earnest hope that these may yet be given you many years of health and happiness in which to enjoy the gratitude of your fellow citizens, so well expressed by your distinguished public services.

Fallacies.

LIVERPOOL, 31.—The suspension of Miller & Fenton, cotton brokers, was announced this morning. At 1 o'clock Henry Pierce & Co. and Jos. Taylor & Co. cotton brokerage firm, were closed.

The excitement in the cotton trade continues. Both exchanges are crowded with merchants, brokers and visitors anxious for the latest developments.

London, 31.—The cotton futures at Liverpool have depressed the stock markets.

The Dynamite Explosion in London.

London, 31.—The excitement over the explosion in the underground railway last night is very great. Large numbers of policemen, under special inspectors, were on duty all night at the various railroad stations and a heavy force was also watching the line. The explosion occurred at a distance of 200 yards west of the station. There was no train there at the time. The walls of the tunnel were battered, but the rails were not displaced. The windows in the station were blown out, but the roof was not damaged and no person was hurt there. At the Praed Street station the force of the explosion was terrible. The tunnel there was not destroyed, but a deep hole was excavated in the road bed, and bricks were blown out and the gas pipes and telegraph lines broken. The refreshment saloon was wrecked and the windows of another room of the station shed. The explosion occurred immediately under a passing train, 40 yards from the station. All the persons injured were in the last two carriages. Twenty-five persons were wounded and taken to the hospital. Four of them seriously hurt and not expected to recover. The others are able to go to their homes tonight. The explosion occurred about 8 10 in the evening.

All the detectives of the metropolitan police force are searching for the perpetrators of the outrage and the railroad officers are assisting them. The police deny that any rocket cartridge has been found near the scene of the explosion. The trace has been discovered of the explosion. It is ascertained that the explosion could not have been caused by coal gas, as the explosion occurred in the tunnel, and the explosion has yet been obtained. A member of the Board of Trade, is now, it is said, making an examination of the scene of the explosion at Charing Cross, and trains are running as usual this morning.

Three o'clock.—The explosion has yet been located at the Praed Street Station. An inspector from the Home Office viewed the scene of the explosion there and afterward examined the damage to the train. He expressed the opinion that cartridges made of the first order of explosive, such as gun cotton, were used, and the guard claims that while looking out of the car window, just after the train left Praed Station, he saw some sparks nearly under the carriage and immediately afterwards heard the explosion. The explosive used was small in quantity and not believed to be dynamite.
