

EATER SALT LAKE—ITS PAST AND FUTURE

BY EDWARD F. COLBORN.

THE Greater Salt Lake—the one we dreamed about for two sleepy decades and fought for against the tides of conservatism—has really arrived. There will be no one to gainsay that. When I look around me and see what wonders have been wrought with brick and stone in this good year 1909, and measure the stately city of today against the Salt Lake that I came here to boom 20 years ago, I realize that I must then have been a ten times optimist to have conceived what the two next decades were to bring forth.

I was in the bloom of my youth and beauty then, and on my head, where now the hairless wastes are found, I had a shock of hair that would have done for any football field in the world. In those days booming Salt Lake was no easy task and many a man who tried it went down to defeat. I remember with a shudder how her as the Old Man of the Sea rode Sinbad, the Sailor. These men never gave up anything for a public purpose nor ever let any one else give up if they could help it. Whenever real estate was offered they said it was too high and whenever anyone showed spirit and tried to put a little turpentine on Salt Lake to make her go faster, these wise men wagged their heads and said that he was a boomer and wouldn't do, and so the sledding for the optimist was pretty hard and the panic of 1903 made it still harder.

But the panic was away, and after a while time and circumstance removed these obstacles from the public path and by and by came a Harriman and a Newhouse with their splendid courage, and the greatest people that ever lived were awakened and Salt Lake came into her own.

Today there sits not on the surface of this continent a city with such good red blood in her veins as has Salt Lake, or one that holds trade and

MORAN GETS TWO PAVING CONTRACTS

Local Contractor Underbids Competitors and Sets Mark Below Engineer's Estimates.

NINTH EAST AND FIRST AVE.

REAL ESTATE and BUILDING

The Daily building which is to be erected on the northeast corner of Fourth South and Main streets, immediately to the south of the Newhouse building, is to be of either three or five stories, of steel and concrete, with nothing definitely decided in regard to its ultimate use. It may be devoted to offices, with store rooms underneath, or it may be an up-to-date apartment building with big stores on the ground floor. Mr. Daly has not yet made up his mind.

But next week bids will be opened for plans which specify both the three and the five story structure. They have been prepared by J. C. Craig, the architect, and are, in their way, complete. They are liable to alterations, however, and the plans as at present determined, may be changed before the weather brings about conditions which are favorable to work.

The plans as prepared by the architect, Mr. Craig, are far reaching in the fact that the underpinning will permit of almost any amount of extension skyward. The plans, they now stand, will mean an expenditure for building purposes of several hundred thousand.

The Porter-Walton company, grain and seed merchants, have purchased from A. H. Vogeler, of the Vogeler Seed and Produce company, a property in the rear of Third West street, between Fifth and Sixth South streets, for $12,000. It is said that the purchasers intend to erect a large grain warehouse on the property, which is advantageously situated near the new Denver and Rio Grande depot.

The Intermountain Milling company intends to do some extensive building shortly after the opening of the new year. The manufacture of meal for cattle from alfalfa is an important industry and already the company is putting up at State and Thirteenth South a mill for the grinding of alfalfa meal. The building is to be two stories in height with a dimension of 30x40. Plans for storage barns and other improvements which will make the plant up in every way are now being worked upon.

The delay on the roof work of the new L. S. gymnasium is at an end because of the arrival of the glass for the skylight. Work is going ahead rapidly now and the whole building will shortly be enclosed. It is hoped that the interior operations to be carried on.

Among a number of other investors who have located in Salt Lake, attracted by the possibilities of the field, is Dr. W. R. Wickoff, recently of the Bear River valley. The doctor already owns 39 lots on west Third South, Eleventh East and Eleventh South, and he is looking about for other investments. He has great faith in the future of the city and is backing up his convictions with his money.

The Dundee Woolen Mills company, a very large concern which has Chicago headquarters, but operates all over the country, is one of the latest acquisitions to the business life of Salt Lake. The building is located in the north half of the building in which is located the Delmar restaurant but is looking about for a site upon which to build their own plant.

Smith Parker has bought for $5,000 from Rev. Francis Burgess, State property on the east side of State street between Seventh and Eighth South. The lot is 50 by 165 and has on it a handsome residence. The deal was through Tuttle Bros.

THE STEWART APARTMENTS.

The above is a picture of the Stewart apartments, which is being built at the corner of First avenue and C street, at a cost of $62,000. It will contain 21 suites, divided into 13 four-room, six three-room and two five-room apartments. It is being erected by Hyrum Stewart, formerly of Kaysville, Davis county, and when completed will be one of the best finished houses of its kind in the city. Fire brick and cut stone are being used to the sill of the second story, the remaining portion being built of buff brick with pink joints, presenting a beautiful appearance. The interior will have hardwood floors, and the basement will be fitted for laundry and storage purposes. All of the walls inside will be tinted with a washable tint similar to that used in the Newhouse buildings. It is furnished with sound-proof partitions and disappearing beds throughout. The architect is G. S. Walker.

much we had to explain—fool notions about the Mormons, and a thousand other things such as that this was not a railroad center and never would be, and that the Gentiles were not welcome, and that money invested would be unsafe because it would be taxed to death, and so forth and so on. But most of all, I remember how little the people of that time seemed to care whether Salt Lake grew or not, and how much opposition was offered to every move that would make for a bigger city.

There was a coterie of men here then—I won't name them, but their names are not forgotten—a select few who by the legerdemain of luck and opportunity had accumulated fortunes and on that account were considered by the rest of the community to be the repositories of great wisdom, and to be able to decide every question affecting the future of Salt Lake. This element of the community was somewhat like "Old Man Banger" in Ware's immortal poem, Neutrality, who "Worked and schemed with a grim determination. That he'd gobble every dollar there was in circulation." And they mounted Salt Lake and rode
