

BOLD ROBBERY ROB A SALOON

Were About to Rob the Germania
But Were Surprised Donning Masks.

$50 FROM GREEN RIVER BAR.

Although Chased by Bartender They Got Away—One of Them Identified by a Victim.

Pioneer day, or more properly speaking the early morning following, furnished one bold robbery and the attempt at another in Salt Lake. The successful raid was made at the Green River saloon, corner of East Temple and Third South street and the thwarted effort took place at the Germania bar, First South and West Temple. It is believed that both occurrences were due to the same two men, who being foiled at one place, went to the other, where better luck awaited them.

CAUGHT DONNING MASK.

Some time between 2 and 4 o'clock, as William Ellis was about to make his exit from the Germania, he saw at the front door a man who was in the act of covering the upper part of his face with a mask. Upon seeing Ellis, the fellow removed the mask and went down the sidewalk to the west entrance, where he engaged in conversation with some one who stood inside the screen door. Ellis told bartender Harry Hanson of what he had seen and warned him to be on the lookout. While he was still talking, two men stepped up to the swinging door in the rear of the room and peered over, but seeing Hanson and Ellis intently looking in that direction, the two men retreated and walked rapidly diagonally across the street westward.

HELD UP BARTENDER.

It was at nearly the same time of the morning, not differing many minutes, when a man walked into the Green River saloon, "Billie" James, the bartender, was alone. The latter, thinking he had a customer, asked the visitor what he would have, and was answered by having a gun thrust into his face, with the admonition to hold up his hands. He knew the man who held the revolver and thought a joke was intended. However, the strong language used by the other man convinced James that there was "something doing," and the injunction was promptly obeyed.

ENTER "SHORTY" MORRIS.

At this juncture in walked a pal of the holdup, who had walked a pal of the end of the bar, when a third party entered. This was no other than "Shorty" Morris, but in hand, and puffing like a miniature steam engine. He saw the man with the gun and knew him. He recognized him as the fellow who was about to enter behind the bar, and when his hand was ordered to be raised, he, too, took the matter as a joke and said, "Sure Mike, I'll take phizky." "You'll take nothing of the kind," said the robber, applying a vile epithet, "put up your hands quick," and up the leads went.

ORDERED TO LIE DOWN.

While James and Norris stood with hands extended and guarded by the man with the revolver, the other man went to the cash register and took all the money it contained, between $50 and $60—checks were not touched. The bartender and Norris were then ordered to lie face downward on the floor, near the pool tables, and when these positions had been assumed, the robbers quitted the premises. As soon as the robbers were out of the door, James and Norris arose, armed themselves, one with an empty revolver and the other with a gun that wouldn't shoot, and went into the street. The holdups were going rapidly eastward, and shouted back for the others to keep away.

"SWARMED WITH OFFICERS."

A telephone message was sent to police headquarters, and within five minutes "the place swarmed with officers" to use the language of Bartender James. By this time, however, no trace of the robbers could be found, and up to a late hour this afternoon they had not been apprehended. As they are both well known, the visitors of their dire-deed work, it is thought certain that both will be caught. The description of the men tallies with that of the fellows who made the attempt at the Germania, and there is little doubt that the same men were engaged at both places. The man who tipped the register at the Green River was a porter at McElroy's saloon on Commercial street, when Norris was a bartender there, and was well known by the latter.

HARVARD WILL LOSE.

Says D. A. Callahan in Discussing
Chances Against Cambridge.

D. A. Callahan remarked today, his beliefs that the Harvard eight oared crew will be defeated by the Cambridge university eight in the race over the Putney-Morika course in September, on the Thames river, Mr. Callahan says the Thames is full of eddies and minor currents that will defeat the Harvard crew, which results invariably to their disadvantage. Moreover, in the case of American crews, it is noticed that they are always deficient in watermanship, and that is the reason why the Harvard crew is so successful. The first Harvard crew to visit England was the four oared crew sent over in 1869, the four oared crew of which was Manager Hoidredge.

Gives our customers perfect satisfaction. It is the "Best of the Good Ones."
T. E. HARPER, Grocer,

of the Burlington. The visitors were snowed under, due, it is claimed, to the captain's allowing his men to indulge in currauts and talk before the race, and in general, not taking the precautions that most any coach would have observed.

Mr. Callahan does not believe that Courtney will really leave Cornell, as he has been there so long that he may be said to be anchored. At all events his system of rowing has become so thoroughly woven into the local aquatic fabric that it is apparently there to stay. The misunderstanding between Courtney and the Cornell athletic committee will be fixed up. Mr. Callahan called attention to the advantages of the American Thames as the ideal place for an American "Henley," and hopes that if such a thing is established in this country, it will be located at New London, and not on the Schuylkill at Philadelphia.

Head-on Smash-up Between Freight
Trains Near Green River, Wyo.

Trains from the east are late today over the Union Pacific owing to one of the worse wrecks in the history of the road from the point of damage to equipment and freight. As far as can be learned nobody was seriously hurt although both crews were badly scratched up through jumping. The wreck occurred at Review, a station just a few miles west of Green River, Wyo., on the Oregon Short Line, at 5:15 last evening, and was a head-on smash-up between regular freight train No. 56 and an extra. Both were going at a lively clip and the resultant smash was terrific. Engines and cars went in all directions and the track was torn up to a considerable distance.

ORDER MUST PAY LIFE INSURANCE

State Supreme Court Opinion
Which Affects Grand Lodge
Of the A. O. U. W.

ORDER ADVANCED THE DUES.

Subsequently Expelled the Member,
Whose Widow Sued for and Won
Insurance Money.

The supreme court this morning handed down an opinion which will be of interest to members of fraternal societies. The case in question was that of Matilda Johanson vs. Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen of Utah, Wyoming and Idaho, involving the payment of life insurance. The court sustains the judgment of the lower court and the insurance must be paid.

George E. Johanson, according to the evidence, joined the fraternal society in 1904. A year afterwards he was taken ill, whereupon the lodge sent him word, as is the custom, that his assessments for the months of February, March, April and May would be advanced and paid into the treasury and they would be in the nature of a loan to him until he was in a position to repay the money. Subsequently the lodge reconsidered the action and eventually expelled him from the lodge on account of delinquent assessments without notifying the parties interested. Two months later Johanson sent in cash for all back dues to date and was informed that he was no longer a member of the organization and his dues would not be accepted unless he were re-examined by a physician. Later Johanson died and his widow sued the order for the insurance. The court found that as Johanson had paid one month's dues that had become delinquent and that the treasurer of the lodge had accepted the same the society was liable.

LUKE HANDED A ROAST.

Atty. William Newton Files an Interesting Document in District Court.

In a suit filed in the district court this afternoon by Atty. William Newton for Charles Miles the collection agency operated by Francis G. Luke is roasted to a dark sepia brown. The attorney acts on behalf of his client Miles and has brought before the court a declaration of justice and peace. The defendant filed an affidavit for change of venue. This affidavit was ignored; it was not even glanced at but the court went right along with the case. Atty. Newton wants the court declared in contempt of justice and all the business it transacts is a harassment of the defendants who are in financial difficulties or those who have reason to affirm that they do not owe bills as charged. It also sets forth that Atty. Kane, who acts as attorney for the collection agency, is really the entire court as he makes out the complaints, posts the court records, attends to the papers and generally gives the justice of the peace local advice, when it comes to rulings and other matters.

Efforts to turn the course of the river being made by the more energetic as it is fast eating its way back to the irrigating Yuma dam; and if that goes out great loss is bound to result. The sea is now 75 miles long, about the distance between New York and Poughkeepsie, on the Hudson; and if the dimensions of the ancient lake are restored, the sea will be about the size of the Caspian sea, and nearly 300 feet deep. As the point of diversion of the river seems to be in Mexico, the matter has become international.

DUG SKELETON FROM TRENCH

Bones of Human Being Exhumed
By City Workmen on West
First South Street Today.

REMAINS ALL GATHERED UP.

Curio Collector With Love for the Gruesome, Pulled Three Teeth
And Took Them Away.

A human skeleton was unearthed at noon today directly in front of the building once occupied by Clark, Eldredge & Company, by workmen engaged in digging a trench for the city water-mains. The remains lay in a somewhat curved position, from southwest to northeast, and up to this afternoon all the bones, except those of the feet, have been taken out. The skeleton was three feet below the surface. The announcement of the discovery soon drew a large crowd of people, among whom there was much discussion as to whether the bones were those of a white person or otherwise, and whether male or female.

The skull was not large, and the forehead somewhat receding, though the upper and back portions of the head were full and well formed, betokening a large brain. Five teeth remained intact, and these were small and perfectly formed and apparently as sound as when the possessor yet lived. Some morbid curio seeker promptly extracted four of the teeth and carried them away. The fifth tooth could not be so readily extracted.

Justice of the Peace Dana T. Smith viewed the remains and ordered them put into a box. When the remaining bones are taken out, all will be reinterred. A physician will doubtless be called in to examine the remains, and sex of the person who, unless he or she died more than 50 years ago, found a resting place in a public street.

KEY PROBLEM AT SALTAIN BEACH

Door Openers Are Disposed of
And Taken Possession of in Most Preplexing Way.

SCORES CARRIED OFF DAILY.

How a Salt Lake Physician Provided
For Friends on Future Crowded
Days—General Gossip.

The management of Saltair resort is grappling just now with a big graft, in which the grafters are apparently individuals of the dear general public, and the chief sufferers are other individuals of the same dear public.

The trouble is in the bathing facilities which are now admitted not to be large enough to accommodate Salt Lake this year, the reason being that Salt Lake has taken a big jump in population and the patronage has suddenly increased beyond the capacity of the bath rooms to handle it. Next year the 500 additional rooms may help some, but for the balance of this year there is a great problem on hand, and it is how to get the fullest possible use out of the 750 bath rooms available, and the trouble here is that keys are stolen, lost, misplaced, and carried away by the score every day, thus temporarily putting out of business a good portion of the available rooms.

As the demand for rooms has increased, the troubles with misappropriated keys has also increased as the temptation to take them has been correspondingly raised. An investigation of the trouble reveals a complicated condition, in which every trait of human characteristics from a mere desire to help a friend, to a desire to "grab" special privileges to the exclusion of others, is shown.

HOW IT WORKS.

Of the latter class a well known Salt Lake physician furnishes a good example. He was seen by a friend at Saltair the other day to take from his pocket five or six keys to the bathing rooms. When "joshed" about his trophies he explained that he had discovered a great way to keep a private bath room, and that by keeping the keys in his pocket he had always been able to find a room. He had taken his key to the crowd. If he found the management had made duplicate keys to one of his "private" rooms, he used another key, till he found a vacant room. The man in charge at the bath suit rooms declared that the keys are made every morning to all rooms where keys are missing, and that it takes from 50 to 70 keys a day to make up for losses.

CARING FOR FRIENDS.

Not all of the keys, of course, are purposely carried away to be kept for the use of the taker, on crowded days, one person uses a room and remembers a friend who is coming out on a later train. He then retains the key, and keeps it to give to the friend not thinking of the big crowd which waits to bath in the bathing rooms, and a string of vacant rooms with no keys, when it tries to go into the lake. Still another class of people either throw or drop their keys into the lake, as over 100 were recently recovered by an exploration of the sands beneath the pavilion.

WORKING IT OUT.

Manager Langford says that he is convinced the key system as at present in vogue, fails to meet the situation, and he is planning to put in substitutes. Many have been suggested. One is to have an attendant for each 100 rooms, with an office to which the bathers may apply to be admitted to a room both on coming out and going into the water. This plan is said to work successfully at Coney Island, where a large number of people use the bath rooms. Another plan is to charge a key deposit, and require the bather to return the key to an attendant before leaving the bathing platform.

ABOUT DEPOSIT QUESTION.

This plan may be put into effect at once, according to Secretary Jos. Nelson of the new Saltair company. He says that he doesn't know of any other method to secure immediate action on the key question, as that the loss of a large part of the keys every day cripples the service, and it is to satisfy the public which is entitled to the best service that can be given. "Personally," he said, "I would rather put up a small deposit, and be sure that I could get a key, than to go out there and take a precarious chance. Some people who get keys near the first numbers, carry them in their pockets, and at the end of the bathing season, if they find a vacant room there, use it, and leave their first keys out there."

STAMP FRAUDS ARRESTS.

New York, July 25.—Five men who were arrested last night were today held in $1,000 bail in police court for further examination in connection with the washing and reselling of state tax stamps. Two additional warrants were issued today for the arrest, it is said, of two men who have been operating stores for the handling of the fraudulent stamps.

RUSSELL SAGE BURIED IN TROY, N. Y.

Troy, N. Y., July 25.—The body of Russell Sage was brought here from New York today and buried in Oakwood cemetery beside the body of his first wife. The body of Mr. Sage arrived here in a private car, attached to a regular train from New York. Another private coach contained the mourners and members of the funeral party, numbering 20 persons. But two formal guests were brought from New York to this city, one of whom was the late banker's office staff, the other a cluster of lilacs of the valley, from the Sage summer home at Lawrence, L. I.

The funeral cortege proceeded from the railroad station at Oakwood, where a large number of persons had gathered at the Sage family lot. After a brief service read by Rev. Dr. Andrew Hageman of New York, the body was committed to the grave. The words which are to be engraved on the Sage monument are: "I have done the best that I could by the light of the day."

A MASSEUSE TELLS OF THAW'S CONDUCT

In Paris Evelyn's Mother Had Been Put Out of the House.

HARRY ACTED LIKE A MANIAC.

When He Went Out for a Stroll He Locked His Dear Girl
Up.

New York, July 25.—The Evening World today published an interview with Miss Anna Crane, a masseuse of this city, whose statement was taken yesterday by an assistant district attorney for possible use in the Thaw case. According to the World interview Miss Crane, who is about 40 years old, was sent to Paris by Stanford White in 1904, in response to appeals from Mrs. Nesbit (now Mrs. Holman), Evelyn Nesbit's mother, and brought the young woman back to New York. Miss Crane is quoted by the World as saying that she knew Miss Nesbit before the young woman and her mother went abroad in 1904, and were followed to Paris by Harry K. Thaw. Mr. White, she said, then sent for her, told her that he had received several communications from Mrs. Holman and asked her to go to Paris and straighten out matters. When she arrived in Paris, Miss Crane said, she found that all three had been living in a beautiful apartment near the Champs Elysees, and that Thaw had been the principal called upon by Miss Nesbit.

"The day before I got there," said Miss Crane, "a terrible row had taken place, and Mrs. Nesbit had been put out of the apartment by Thaw, who acted like a maniac. Mrs. Nesbit was nearly destitute, and but for the timely arrival of a woman newspaper writer who had gone abroad with the Nesbits and been left in London, she would never have got back to the United States. The newspaper woman aided Mrs. Nesbit with her own money and subsequently called Mr. White for funds."

She declared her belief that
