

THAW QUIT ABOUT EVEN WITH JEROME

For Ten Long Hours He Answered
His Questions and Parried His Thrusts.

THE INQUISITION IS FINISHED

Petitioner and His Attorney Express
Themselves as Well Satisfied
With Progress of Case.

White Plains, N. Y., July 29.—Dist. Atty. Jerome, prosecutor of both Thaw murder trials, finished his inquisition of Harry K. Thaw this evening in the supreme court hearing of Thaw's application for release from Matteawan.

All told, yesterday and today, Harry Thaw faced Mr. Jerome's lightning thrusts for 10 hours, yet he held his own at all times, and tomorrow he will be in the hands of friends. His attorney, Charles Morshausen, expects to call him in the morning. This examination may be as long as Jerome's, and after it the district attorney may have a few more questions to ask.

Notwithstanding the mental strain of his examination, Thaw labored late to night with his attorney in Justice Miller's ante-room, going over the exhibits used by Mr. Jerome in his rapid fire of cross-questions.

These consisted of various papers containing notes and drawings found in Thaw's cell in the Tombs after he was sent to Matteawan.

What use Mr. Jerome will make of them will develop later. But their appearance seemed to bother the Thaw somewhat, and after court adjourned Mrs. William C. Thaw, the prisoner's mother, gave out an interview in which she said the production of these papers by the state proved the charges she made in a printed pamphlet that her son had been hurried away to the asylum without being allowed to get his clothes or other effects in his cell.

On the whole, however, Thaw and his attorney are well satisfied with the day's work.

Yesterday Mr. Jerome devoted himself to the prisoner's life history. Today he based his questions chiefly upon the various documents, notes and memoranda, which he produced in surprising numbers. The one he found most useful was a tablet containing 25 sheets of foolscap paper on which were pasted a strange variety of newspaper clippings and scraps of manuscript. Thaw identified it as something he had prepared and sent to Delphin M. Delmas, his chief counsel.

Asked how he knew this, he said Dr. Jelliffe had told him so at Matteawan. Thaw again showed his dislike for Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton. While other alienists might have been misled, he did not think Hamilton was.

"You do not think Dr. Hamilton was misled by a falsehood, do you?" said Jerome.

Thaw's counsel objected to the reading of some of these statements, but in one case requested that Mr. Jerome be allowed to read the paper to the court.

On cross-examination, Mr. Morshausen reverted to Hartridge's suit against Mrs. William C. Thaw. "It involves about $25,000 now," remarked the witness, "but it may involve more."

Hartridge admitted that he had already received $108,000 from Mrs. Thaw, but it was for "various purposes."

Susan Merrill was re-called and Mr. Jerome asked her along the lines of her previous testimony, alleging that Thaw flogged young women at her lodging house. "She described the case of one girl in particular, whom, she said, she saw treated in this manner."

"When Mr. Thaw went away," she said, "he left money for this girl and for others. I saw three or four girls whipped in all," she asserted.

"Did you ever write letters to Stanford White?" asked Thaw's counsel.

"Yes, sir."

"Did he ever call at your place?"

"Yes, a few times."

Mrs. Merrill said she got acquainted with White when he called to see her about renting an apartment.

THAW TAKES STAND.

Harry Thaw then took the stand and Jerome's first question was the old one: "You crazy when you killed White?"

"I don't know," said Thaw. "I was not medically so."

"How do you know?"

"The doctors told me so."

"Did not several doctors," said Jerome, naming four, "swear in your presence that you were unable to appreciate the quality of your acts when you killed White?"

"I think so."

As the witness took the stand, his wife entered and took a seat, where she had a full view of his face.

A private stenographer employed by Thaw's family took down all this part of the examination.

Thaw's demeanor was as unruffled as it was yesterday and he swung his palm leaf fan without apparent nervousness.

While Jerome hunted through his papers Thaw turned and talked smilingly with Justice Mills.

Evelyn Thaw had not sat three minutes when she went into an ante-room for consultation with Asst. Dist. Atty. Murphy from Jerome's office. She returned in a few moments and Thaw's were perhaps the only eyes in the room not turned on her.

Thaw said he was willing to accept the judgment of 14 alienists who said he was irresponsible when he killed White.

"I think I may have had a 'brain storm,'" he suggested.

Jerome pounced upon the word.

"What do you mean by 'brain storm'?"

"Was it a feeling of sudden anger or jealousy?"

"No, it was not jealousy. The alienists have explained it."

JEROME ANGERS THAW.

Jerome's aggressiveness at length seemed to anger Thaw and after the district attorney had read an alienist's assertion that he had "dementia praecox," or adolescent insanity, he asked with asperity:

"Do you think I have dementia praecox?"

"No," replied Jerome promptly, "but that is not the point."

Thaw declared that several alienists were misled by misinformation, derived largely from the New York district attorney's office.

Asked how he knew this, he said Dr. Jelliffe had told him so at Matteawan.

Thaw again showed his dislike for Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton. While other alienists might have been misled, he did not think Hamilton was.

"You do not think Dr. Hamilton was misled by a falsehood, do you?" said Jerome.

Thaw's counsel objected to the reading of some of these statements, but in one case requested that Mr. Jerome be allowed to read the paper to the court.

"I do not know whether he would or not," Jerome turned over to the witness a number of newspaper clippings that Thaw had sent to Atty. Delmas on the charge that he might have been something of value in the morning up.

The district attorney defied him to find anything there of the least value to the lawyer defending a man on the charge of murder. Thaw fingered the clippings for a moment.

ACCEPTS JEROME'S DEFT.

"Here is something," he answered, and read slowly and impressively the following words from one of President Roosevelt's messages:

"The hideous crime of rape, the most abominable in all the category of crimes."

Thaw read several other extracts, including letters he had received in person and editorial comment.

From the sheets in his hands Thaw read also quotations from the Bible and from the literature of the day.

"The book I send you is 'Peroy's Reliques About St. George,'" with a verse marked.

"Was it your idea that Delmas should liken you to St. George?" asked Jerome.

"No," the story as I remember it was about the dragon. And Thaw went on to tell the familiar story.

"The idea," he said, "was that Mr. White was to be likened to the dragon."

Jerome dropped the clippings and held up a little note containing a pen and ink drawing.

"Are you willing this should be shown?"

"Most certainly not."

"Because it is addressed to my wife and only proper for her to see?"

"Don't you want us to find out whether you are crazy or not?"

"Yes."

"Then why don't you want this letter read? Isn't this an obscene letter?" demanded Jerome, holding it out.

"It might be if written to another man's wife, but not if written to mine."

Thaw was asked to identify a gold hairpin, with a miniature dog's head at the end. He said he had seen it before.

"Was it ever the end of a whip?"

"It might have been the handle of a maul."

Jerome then presented the report of the commission of alienists appointed by Judge Fitzgerald during the first trial. Its contents had never before been made public. This commission examined Thaw behind closed doors, admitting attorneys for neither side, and reported that the prisoner was sane enough to confer with his counsel. On the strength of it, his trial was allowed to go on.

Jerome remarked that the mystery surrounding this report made him curious to see its contents.

After a brief conference with his client, Mr. Morshausen consented to have the report read.

The examination of the alienists' report was postponed, while Jerome read to the court the report of the attorney Delmas to aid him in the first trial. From this he read the following extracts from letters received by Thaw during the trial.

"Young man, you have intentionally and fearfully antagonized the red dragon of Holy Writ. See Revelations xii."

"The unpardonable wrong, the offense no true man can condone—the violation of a maiden."

"A woman close to the sun, a woman with a diamond in her hair, a woman whose head and a moon beneath her feet."

THE RED DRAGON.

Thaw denied ever referring to White as the "Red Dragon," as one of the alienists alleged.

Some letters received by Thaw and turned over to Delmas were rather incoherent, and Thaw asked the witness what value he thought they could have.

Thaw replied that some of this exhibit was rubbish, and some of the letters might have been written by cranks, but they contained ideas that he thought Delmas might possibly use.

SPAIN IN THROES OF REVOLUTION

At Barcelona Revolutionists Driven Into St. Martin Square,
And Slaughtered There.

SURVIVORS SURRENDERED.

An Official Statement Says That Now
Only Remains to Overcome
Small Groups.

Madrid, July 29.—It was officially announced tonight that the cavalry at Barcelona succeeded today in driving into St. Martin square the principal bands of revolutionists, against whom the military opened fire, causing great losses of life.

The survivors surrendered.

The official statement further says that it now remains only to overcome small groups of revolutionists in the villages near Barcelona.

Premier Maura announced tonight this favorable report from Barcelona: "The arrival of reinforcements," said the premier, "will permit the suppression of outbreaks."

Throughout the night, however, advisers indicated that the disturbances in Catalonia were as serious as ever, although the government has succeeded in getting troops through to certain of the disaffected points. The lines of communication, which had been cut everywhere in Barcelona, have in part been repaired.

The recruiting system has served to increase the dissatisfaction of the people. All Spaniards 20 years old must report for military duty, but the rich usually manage to be excused.

Subsequent drawings by lot, however, they are unfortunate they can buy exemption for $300. Only the poor people, therefore, serve.

When the war broke out with Morocco the Spaniards had only 200,000 to fill the gap, and not only were the reserves on leave recalled, but on July 29 the next year's recruits were called out. The soldiers insist that the only fair way is a compulsory service which takes the rich and poor alike.

"Besides," say the men, "they are sending us like dogs to be killed in Africa to please the bankers."

SPAIN'S TWO FEARS.

Madrid, July 29.—Spain tonight is rent by two fears—the fate of the army in Morocco and the situation in the Mediterranean province in Catalonia.

At the outskirts of Melilla the Spanish arms have suffered a serious check. Three thousand soldiers have been slain or wounded, and the Moorish forces are fighting at the very walls of the city itself. News from Barcelona, the center of the revolutionary outbreak, is exceedingly meager and unsatisfactory.

From Lisbon comes the report that the revolutionists are using bombs and that 100 persons were killed and 200 wounded during the earlier stages of the conflicts.

Premier Maura's announcement that the situation in Barcelona showed a little improvement and word from Melilla that the Moors were retreating from Mount Gurugú, only slightly appeased the general disquiet. The Moorish forces, however, have been strengthened by the arrival of over 1,000 additional tribesmen and the official judgment that 5,000 Spanish troops are needed to overcome them.

It would indicate that the Melilla army of Spain is in sore straits.

A Moorish army is marching on Algeiras and a warship has been briefly dispatched from Melilla to aid the garrison. Insurrectionary outbreaks are reported from many points in Spain. At Granollers two convicts have been burned, while at Castell de la Selva the civil guard was disarmed and imprisoned in the barracks.

The revolutionists are active in Lugo and Figueras. The railroads have been destroyed. Financial institutions are sending their funds across the frontier.

The report that a provisional government has been established at Barcelona, and that the governor has been assassinated is unconfirmed, but rumors are persistent that a military dictatorship will be set up in Madrid.

GRANDMOTHER RESCUES GRANDCHILD FROM DROWNING

New York, July 29.—Mrs. J. Carlin of Harbor Terrace, Corona, L. I., does not permit the fact that she is a grandmother to interfere with her athletic prowess. She proved the fact yesterday by rescuing her grandchild, a 12-year-old boy, from drowning in Flatbush bay.

The athletic grandmother almost lost her own life in the accomplishment of the feat. That, however, was due to the fact that her grandchild ter lost her presence of mind and nearly choked her rescuer in the water.

Grandmother and granddaughter were both unconscious when they were pulled to the shore. The older woman revived almost immediately, but it required nearly three hours to resuscitate the granddaughter.

LIEUT. Z. PIKE.

Denver, Colo., July 29.—The body of Zebulon Montgomery Pike, early explorer of the Rocky mountains region and discover of the famous peak that bears his name, will be brought to Colorado for final burial, according to plans arranged today by Curator Ferrell of the state historical society. Curator Ferrell has just received word from Sackett Harbor, Mass., that the bodies of 256 soldiers are being disinterred at Madison Barracks cemetery. Among them is that of Lieut. Pike.

It is planned to bury Pike at the foot of Pike's Peak near Colorado Springs. Lieut. Pike was killed at the battle of York, April 27, 1813. He was in the battle but later his body was transferred to Madison Barracks cemetery.

Y. M. C. A. CONFERENCE.

Barmen-Elberfeld, Germany, July 29.—The world's conference of Young Men Christian Associations today was devoted to reports from all nations. That of the United States evoked the greatest enthusiasm. This report showed that there were 1,953 organizations, 448,000 members and $50,000,000 Y. M. C. A. property in that country. The figures for the entire world are 7,825 organizations, 821,000 members and $50,000,000 in property.

The Kaiser telegraphed "The blessings of God on the conference. Work for the welfare of the rising generation."
