MUSICIANS HOME.

Organists Radcliff and McClellan, Also H. S. Goddard, the Baritone, Return.

Several well known local musical artists returned home this morning. They were Prof. Thomas Radcliff, organist of the First Congregational church, who gave a dedicatory recital on the new First Methodist church organ at Boise, Ida., Wednesday evening last; Prof. J. J. McClellan, organist of the Tabernacle, who gave recitals last Monday and Tuesday morning on the great organ at the world's fair; and H. S. Goddard, the baritone who has been giving a series of successful concerts in the north. With Prof. McClellan was Thomas Giles, who accompanied him to St. Louis.

The Boise party received speak very highly of Prof. Radcliff's effort, referring to him as one of the most accomplished artists who ever visited the capital city. He gave a dozen numbers, including the encores, and was very well received by an audience that filled the church auditorium, and showed off the new $4,000 instrument in a way that charmed every one. The professor was handsomely entertained while at Boise, and given to understand that his visit and efforts were appreciated. The program given was of the high order of selection usual in Prof. Radcliff's recitals. He returns delighted with the trip.

Prof. McClellan returns home with enviable laurels, and with the assurance from noted St. Louis musicians and organists and critics that it had remained for him to bring out the qualities and demonstrate the remarkable scope and power of what is claimed to be the greatest organ in the world. The St. Louis papers all made a good deal of the Salt Lake artist, printing his picture and giving considerable space to him and his playing. The biographical notices were just a trifle off—the results of overworked and tired brains stimulated for the occasion by imagination. For instance, the St. Louis Star referred to McClellan as a Scotchman who had been in Utah for eight years, and organist at the Tabernacle for the last five years. Moreover, the Star excited St. Louis young ladyhood by asserting that the Salt Lake was unmarried and a very eligible young man. Prof. McClellan states that he never saw a reporter to speak with him while in the city. But then, the St. Louis papers meant well, and were real kind. There were quite a number of prominent visiting organists and critics attendant on the recitals Monday and Tuesday morning, and at the conclusion they hurried to the platform to heartily congratulate the performer on his work, and assure him of its remarkably high character. The audience, too, was demonstrative, and it was made plain, as an eastern organist subsequently remarked to the artist, that he was now one of the more notable members of the profession. The program met with marked favor, and from the attention Prof. McClellan received both in Music hall and outside, he had every reason to consider that his performance was one of the more noted events of his life.

Amusements

At the Theater tonight "A Chinese Honey Moon" opens an engagement which will last two nights and a Saturday matinee.

"The Little Outcast" was not out in the front for his Thanksgiving evening. At the grand theater a packed house extended him a sympathetic greeting and cheered his heroism in tight places for four long acts. Bob, the little newsboy who "never forgets a friend," was a favorite from the first, especially by up in the gallery, where the "newsies" who recognized him as a fellow craftsman, were especially demonstrative in his favor.

The play is one of the stirring melodramas that seem to be perpetually popular, however fashions change in other forms of the art. The performance last night pleased both in its plot, which is spilling over with thrilling adventures, and in its characters, each of whom is an individual with strong personal distinctions. The play has been seen here before, but the company this year has lost none of its excellence, and went through the play in a satisfactory manner. Except for the role of Miss Mollie Dupree, the hit of the evening was made by Walter Harmon as Paul Weston. His portrayal of the role was an excellent bit of character acting, in which the change made by a varying environment was clearly brought out.

"The Little Outcast" goes again tonight, tomorrow night, and at a matinee Saturday.

There is not a sign along the Pacific coast of any change in the present unprecedented spell of clear weather, and yesterday's weather may fail to show much of any precipitation anywhere in the country. A high barometric area prevails over the entire United States. People are beginning to think there must be something the matter with the Japan current, as that is supposed to be a governing factor in the arrangement of the weather on the Pacific slope.

MRS. M. SEWALL WAXES INDIGNANT

Honorary President of the International Council of Women Raises Protest.

WRITES TO MRS. E. B. WELLS.

Seeks Co-operation of Utah Ladies to See New States Have Suffrage
In Constitution.

Mrs. Emmeline B. Wells today received the following communication, which was addressed to the women of the United States of America and signed by May Wright Sewall, honorary president of the International Council of Women:

"Some weeks ago I received a letter asking that I should add my signature to many others which were affixed to a protest against the admission of any more states into the Union under constitutions providing for the disfranchisement of women. I gladly acceded to the request, but I confess that I did not at the time quite understand the enormity of the offense which, from my point of view, is being committed against American womanhood. Had I, I should have wished to write my name in capitals, and long ago should have appealed to my countrywomen to join me in an expression of resentment against the bill proposing the admission of four or five territories as two new states, which I understand is now in the hands of the committee on territories. No objection have I to having the Indian territory and Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona pass from the tutelage of territorial government into the joy and dignity of sovereign statehood, but I do protest against having any bill looking to this transition indicate to the impatient states that they may be admitted to the Union under constitutions which disfranchise their women. I consider the terms of this bill particularly obnoxious. It seems that the following occurs twice, appearing first in paragraph five, section three, of the bill, and repeated in paragraph five of section 21. The part of the bill which excites my resentment is as follows:

"That said state shall never enact any law restricting or abridging the right of suffrage on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude, or on account of any other conditions or qualifications, save any except on account of illiteracy, minority, sex, conviction of felony, mental condition or residence, provided, however, that any such restrictions shall be uniform and applicable alike to all citizens."

"The presentation of a bill including this obnoxious paragraph in Congress apparently gives to the disfranchisement of women not only a passive acceptance on the part of the general government, but it seems like an expression of its active desire. Note the position of the word 'sex.' Placed between the phrases 'minority' and 'conviction of felony,' it is made to seem either a condition of partial development or of absolute disfigurement. Moreover, this condition, being born to become a woman, however it may have been regarded by undeveloped races in former times, has always been and now is considered by developed peoples an election of particular sacredness and nobility. The passage of such a bill cannot but have a degrading social influence. It is equivalent to a declaration by the general government that it is at best an unfortunate or evil thing to be born a woman."

"The general government on all occasions declares what all good patriots are bound to believe, that citizenship in the republic is a lofty privilege; that in a republic the sign of sovereignty, its instrument and its weapon is the ballot."

"With the exception of women, all classes which by this bill are excluded from the exercise of the ballot, suffer from a limitation which in its very nature is or may be temporary. Minors are only to wait for their jubilee birthday; illiterates have to exert themselves only sufficiently to learn to read; felons may by the expiration of the term of years involved in the sentence be restored to society, or with or without pardon may receive gubernatorial pardon and gain therewith the elective franchise. Even lunatics may be restored to sanity, or without such restoration, to freedom."

"It is sufficiently humiliating to have aspiring territory knock for entrance into the sisterhood of states bearing a proposed constitution which looks to the disfranchisement of half of their adult population; but to have the United States government say to an aspiring territory that the constitution to be acceptable must brand womanhood with indignity is a still more grievous thing to bear. This condition is harder to bear now than it was in four states of the Union before we possessed the power of self-determining citizenship, than it was when women throughout the country were equally helpless and disfranchised. It is most improbable that members of Congress from Wyoming, Utah, Idaho and Colorado will vote in favor of this section of the proposed bill, for where women already enjoy the right of suffrage men pay to their opinions the real homage which theoretically is always given to the 'eternal feminine.'" "I call the particular attention of the women of the country to the fact that on the 8th day of June at a business session of the Third quinquennial of the International Council, the representatives of nineteen national councils, including an individual membership of several millions of women all voted without one dissenting voice that therefore the international council should stand everywhere committed to the policy included in the following declaration:

"That inasmuch as all governments equally affect the men and women living under them, therefore, be it resolved that under all governments, whether nominally Republican or Monarchical, whatever political rights or privileges are accorded to men ought on corresponding conditions to be accorded to women."

"The debate upon this subject occupied three hours. The arguments, for the most part, concerned only the form under which this large conviction of the council should be expressed.
There was material agreement among the women of all countries embraced within the Council concerning the propriety of an individual proposition. In the end it was in the form cited above, the broadest in which it was presented, that the proposition was unanimously voted. While it is quite true that by the constitution of the council every affiliated council is left free and may abstain from active support of council propaganda, it is also to be observed that great moral support is given to propaganda by the vote of so representative a body as the executive of the International Council of Women."

Always Remember the Full Name Laxative Bromo Quinine
Cures a Cold in One Day, Grip in 2 Days

There sat in its executive sessions the actual representatives of sixteens of the nations composing it, representing a great diversity not only of nationalities, but even of races, faiths, and governments; but all were agreed that the hour has struck for the abolition of every distinction in the political rights and privileges of men and women under whatever form of government they may exist, which are based upon sex.

"I, therefore, appeal in the name of the International Council of Women, to recognize the strength which the vote cited gives to her individual opinion; and in this strength, I appeal to her in turn to write to the senator representing her state in the United States senate, a protest against the passage of the section above cited in the bill under which it is proposed to add two more to the galaxy of states. Thus will the action taken by a world body in the capital city of a military empire become effective as an agency in reviving enlarged liberty to women in a republic."

"Begging every woman under whose eye this letter may fall to send at once to Senator Beveridge for a copy of the bill above referred to, and to follow up by an individual protest against the sections indicated, I am, with abiding faith in the principles of Democracy, and with an intense desire to aid in developing our nominal Democracy into a genuine republic, with great esteem for my countrywomen."
