A CHARMING DRAPERY ARRANGEMENT.

Very sheer fabrics predominate in both high and low necked evening gowns. Pale yellow is the color note of the model illustrated, the orkeda silk slip being of this fashionable tint, with the spangled lace over dress partaking of shades of cream from cream to deep brown. The spangling of this over-dress is done with cut steel beads encircling shell pink stones, producing a truly beautiful effect. The high-draped girdle is made of the lace built over a pink lining. Two small pink velvet bows are placed at the shoulder line of the low-cut bodice, defining the point from which rows of amber and pink beads are draped across the corsage and over the frilly sleeve puffs.

"Do you play skat?" is now the correct thing, and everyone seems anxious to know something about the new candidate for public favor as the fashionable game of cards during the winter. In "Foster's Skat Manual," just published by McClure, Phillips & Co., we are told that while skat is of German origin, it has been so much improved since its adoption by Americans that the Germans themselves are now following our ideas for counting and our rules for play. The elements of skat were brought together in the Tarok club in Altenburg, at the beginning of the last century, but little or nothing is now left of the original game. Any number, from three to six can play, but only three take part in the actual play of the cards on each deal. The 32-card pack is used, and 10 cards are given to each player, two being laid aside for the skat. Instead of allowing the dealer to name the trump, as in bridge, the players bid against one another for the privilege, and the successful bidder is opposed to the two other players. He can pick out a suit in his own hand, or he can turn up one or other of the skat cards to determine the trump, or he can take both those cards into his hands, and then declare. Instead of trying to win the majority of the tricks, as at bridge, the object is to get the majority of the 210 points that the faces of the cards are worth. Judging from the illustrations in the "Skat Manual," the game is quite as scientific as bridge, if not more so, and much more amusing.

Newbro's Herpicide

"I am sending you my photograph to show what Newbro's Herpicide has done for me. Since I first tried Herpicide upon my hair I have used it exclusively in giving scalp treatments to others, and I would not think of trying to get along without it." (Signed) MRS. ANNA CONNER. 2807 Archer Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Hundreds of lady scalp specialists and hair dressers use and recommend Newbro's Herpicide. Instead of products of their own manufacture upon which a much larger profit could be made. They claim that Herpicide makes friends for them and gives much better satisfaction. Some hair dressers use Herpicide for obstinate cases only, but why not use the best first.

Herpicide is a delightful dressing that can be used when there is no disease of the hair or scalp, and as an actual remedy for dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair it stands in a class singularly its own. Many ladies object to a gummy and sticky hair dressing, or one that is full of sedimentary chemicals intended to dye the hair. The marked preference for a clean and dainty preparation, particularly one that overcomes excessive oiliness and leaves the hair light and fluffy, is reflected in the enormous sale of Newbro's Herpicide. Discriminating ladies become enthusiastic over its refreshing quality and exquisite fragrance. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

CONSIDERATE HIGHWAYMAN.

Lancia, the noted Italian automobilist, was asked the other day if he did not think motor racing too dangerous.

"Dangerous—yes," M. Lancia replied. "Too dangerous—no. For nothing that benefits mankind—and automobiles benefit mankind inexpressibly—is too dangerous for a man to undertake.

"I have a good deal of contempt for men who are not brave to the point of rashness. I am like a highwayman who held up a gasoline runabout on the outskirts of Rome.

"This highwayman stopped the runabout with a shot in the air. Then he ran forth from the tomb that had concealed him—the hold-up happened on the Appian way—and found, to his surprise, only a woman in the little car.

"Where, madam, is your husband?" he demanded, sternly and suspiciously. "He's under the seat," she answered, flushing.

"Then," said the highwayman, "I won't take anything. It's bad enough to have a husband like that without being robbed into the bargain."—Baltimore News.
