

OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH. — JULY 12, 1895.

Junction City Notes.

Yesterday afternoon A. H. Childs of Brevard, N.C., a boy sixteen, if not half seventeen, was sitting on the end of a tie about half a mile south of the Union depot on the Union Pacific track. No. 7 came along from the east and the unfortunate met his death. He was sitting on the steps of the engine, holding the handle of the coupler, holding the steps of the coupler, holding the head and crushing his right arm. The train stopped and brought him to the depot whence he was taken to the city hospital.

At the city jail is a woman about 20 years old, who gives the name of Lucy Jean Gray. She is a well built, robust, dark-skinned, the strongest and with the manner gets drunk and who uses profanity. Being unshaven, she is found on the streets night and day in a most deplorable condition. It is claimed she is a widow, having lost her husband, the man of her crutch, her friends will not own her. The county officials have been notified and no doubt the unfortunate woman will be cared for at the poor house.

The Democrats have held their ward meetings to elect delegates to the Territorial convention in Salt Lake tomorrow. Ogden's delegation will be represented by a mixed delegation—citizens as well as gentlemen.

ONE CAT WORTH $12,500.

Did You Ever See a Four-Footed Cat? — Cats That Look Like Panthers.

It is estimated that there are 300,000 cats in England and 67 varieties. With the greater number of these vary the average reader to probably quite unfamiliar.

Cat-shells and white tomcats are very common, says an English writer, but a few years ago it was believed to be impossible that any cat could be so tame that they exist only in imagination.

Any one who happens to possess a female red tabby without any white spots would obtain a price which would keep him in comfort for at least a couple of years without work. Female red tabbies are as rare as certain shell forms.

The tabs in Paris eat just now ranc on the deep sleep with orange colored eyes. Edward Lloyd, the tamer, has given up which he reluctantly refuse $150. The bright yellow tints is a feature of Parisian cats. Persons, the price ranging according to size.
