Honors the Life and Career of That Soldier and High-minded Citizen.

Washington, Jan, 19 .- The one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Gen. Robert E. Lee was commemorated here toright under the auspices of the United Confederate and Southern societies of the District of Columbia. The ballroom of the New Willard hotel was filled to overflowing. A special section was set apart for Confederate veterans, who marched to the hall escorted by Spanish war veterans. Although un-able to attend, President Roosevelt sent a letter, in which he extolled the virtues of the Confederacy's great general. His suggestion that the centennial anniversary be celebrated by the establishment of a permanent Lee meestablishment of a permanent Lee me-morial with some great representative educational institution of the south met with favor. The exercises were presid-ed over by Hillary A. Herbert, former secretary of the navy. The reading of the president's letter was assigned to Mrs. Ralph Walsh, president of the District of Columbia division United Daughters of the Con-federace.

the hundredth anniversary of Gen.Robert E. Lee:

"Gentiemen—I regret that it is not in my power to be with you at your celebration. I join with you in honoring the life and career of that soldier and high-minded citizen whose fame is now a matter of pride to all our countrymen. Terrible though the day of the Civil war; awful though it was that a conflict should occur between brothers, it is yet a matter for gratitude on the part of all Americans that this, alone among contests of like magnitude, should have left both sides as a priceless heritage the memory of the mighty men and the glorious deeds which iron days brought forth. The courage and steadfastness, the lofty fealty to the right as it was given to each man to see the right whether he wore the gray or the blue, now makes the memories of the valiant feats, alike of those who served under Lee precious to all good Americans,
"Gen. Lee has left us the memory, not merely of his extraordinary skill as a general, his dauntless courage and his leadership in campaign and battle, but also of that serene greatness of soul characteristic of those who most readily recognize the obligations of civic duty. Once the war was over he instantly undertook the task of healing and binding up the wounds of his countrymen in the true spirit of those who feel malice toward none and charity toward all, in that spirit which from the throes of the Civil war charity toward all, in that spirit which from the throes of the Civil war brought forth the real indissoluble Union of today. It was eminently fitting that this great man, this war-worn veteran of a mighty struggle, who at its close, simply and quietly undertook his duty as a plain, everyday citizen, bent only upon helping his people in the paths of peace and tranquility, should turn his aftention toward educational work, toward bringing up in fit fashion the younger generation the sons of those who had proved their faith by their endeavor in the heroic days.

"There is no need to dwell on Gen, Lee's record as a soldier. The son of Light Horse Harry Lee of the revolution, he came naturally by his aptitude for arms and command. His can charity toward all, in that spirit which of Light Horse Harry Lee of the revo-lution, he came naturally by his apti-tude for arms and command. His cam-paigns put him in the foremost ranks of the great captains of all time. But his signal valor and address in war are no more remarkable than the spirit in which he turned to the work of peace, once the war was over. The circum-stances were such that most men, even of his high character felt bitter and vindictive or oppressed or spiritless vindictive or oppressed or spiritless but Gen. community, which appreciates the kindness of the Americans. As soon as it became known what had been done by Gov, Swettenham and that the American ships, in consequence, were to leave, an emergency meeting of the city council was called. The discussion showed that the governor's attitude toward the Americans did not meet with the approval of those officials, and a letter to Admiral Davis was drafted and adopted in which the action of Sir Alexander Swettenham was wholly disapproved and the American government and officers were warmly thanked for the thoughtful, effective and timely aid they had given in the emergency. This later was immediately dispatched.

Admiral Davis was also asked to remain in spite of the unfortunate incident. The request was dispatched to him and he made a reply in which he said that there was no misunderstanding with the Jamaican authorities, but he added significance in reply to the request to remain: "As a foreign naval officer I am bound to respect the wishes of the constituted authorities of Jamaica."

Caigary, Alberta, Jan. 29.—A tragedy, the full details of which probably never will be known, has wiped out the entire family of Edward Ferdinand, proprietor of a tannery here. The police, on breaking into the house, found Ferndinand dead in bed, the dead body of a new-born infant at his side, while the dead body of Mrs. Ferdinand lay on the floor near the bed. In another bed were two young boys, still alive, but so badly frozen that they died while being taken to the hospital. The supposition is that the family was overcome by coal gas; that the wife recovered sufficiently to attempt the adjustment of the pipes, gave premature birth to a child and died.

A panic followed on the Haworth Castle. The Vaderland kept her nose in the breach in the other vessel and in order to facilitate life-saving three ladders were thrown over the Vaderland's bows. By these 17 of the Haworth Castle's crew, including Capt. Whitton, climbed aboard. Seaman Nicholson was curshed between the vessels, Steward Parkinson was imprisoned in the cabin. Engineer Lowe was killed by steam from the exploding boilers. Several of the Vaderland's passengers came on deck 20 minutes after the accident occurred, but were only in time to see the Haworth Castle sink.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 20.—It is stated here, through a friend of Richard Mansfield, to whom it was confided during the tragedian's recent engagement in this city in "Peer Gynt." that he would devote mucheof his time in the future to writing plays. During his Chicago engagement he blocked out and arranged a scenario for a new play for which Manager Askin immediately secured the rights for Ezra Kendall, and which will be used by that comedian as soon as completed. Mr. Mansfield has turned over the details of writing the dialogue, arranging the scenes, etc., to Paul Witach, under whose name it will be produced. The new play is laid along the lines of the comedies which were produced by the late Sol Smith Russell, but it is to be more purposeful and of a higher class. According to trainmen of the freight, the powder was exploded by the concussion made by the passenger train, which was slowing down for the station at Sandford. Another theory is that gas escaping from an oil pipe lime nearby entered the powder car and a spark from the passing engine ignited the was. Others express the belief that the disaster was due to a tramp or intoxicated man firing a shot into the car.

There was no efficient water supply to fight the flames, and the bitter cold added to the suffering.

Four badly mutilated bodies were found in the woods several hundred feet from the tracks.

One thousand feet of the track was torn up and a great hole shows where the powder car stood. This car was being hauled from Concord Junction, Mass., to East Alton, Ill., and contained 500 kegs of powder.

Engineer Welch and Fireman Jerrod of Mattoon, Ill., who were in charge of the passenger train, were hurled nearly 100 feet through the air and fell in a muddy field.

The explosion and fire destroyed telegraphic communication, and Sanford with its victims was alone for hours. The first news to reach here from the wreck came by those who walked the distance to secure help. Relief trains with physicians and supplies were started out at once.
