Country Now Safe—No more cashiers' checks are being paid out by the banks; and as fast as the checks that are out are returned through the receiving tellers, they are packed away, to be destroyed later. The banks of the country are now pretty well loaded with currency removed from the hoarding places, and "the country is safe."

Local Functions Substituted—The Consolidated Wagon & Machine company has substituted for the annual round-up in this city of agents and employees from its various branch establishments, local meetings and banquets at Montpelier, Ogden, Logan, Idaho Falls, and other places. These gatherings are also attended by officials and directors from Salt Lake.

Another paper yesterday similarly enterprising, stated with equal assurance that on that day, the First avenue line would be abandoned. Almy is also in Syracuse, visiting with Mrs. Parker.

Bureau Still Busy—The bureau of information on the tabernacle grounds is entertaining about the same number of tourists every day, as last year, though during November and December the number fell off owing to the hard times. The custodians report that travelers are no longer asking the absurd questions so many of them formerly indulged in, as the tabernacle is more enlightening than it was on the actual facts of "the Mormon question." Tourists now are inquiring as to the principles of Mormonism, and go away feeling that they have learned something. In the summer time, the bureau entertains as many as 1,000 strangers a day.

ALL EYES IN CORRECTION BILL

Rural Districts Are of the Opinion
Panio Was a Bankers' Scare.

CHICAGO BANKERS OPPOSE.

Pointed Out That Western Banks Hold
$27,000,000 of Bonds Required
By Aldrich Bill.

Members of Congress who are interested in the passage at this session of currency legislation to meet the monetary stringency were inclined to express themselves more strongly than ever in favor of the Aldrich bill yesterday because of the opposition of certain associations of bankers. Some of them reported that if the Aldrich bill were supported by a majority of the bankers of the country that very fact would make it an unpopular measure in their districts.

The impression has gone pretty generally through the rural districts, these representatives said, that the recent financial flurry was due more to the fear of bankers than to the fear of business men. The bankers, it is declared, were the ones who began the hoarding of money, and the western bankers, who are opposing the Aldrich bill, were the first to place their communities on a clearing house basis.

VANDERLIP OPPOSED BILL.

It was also pointed out that one of the strongest opponents of the Aldrich bill was the City National bank of New York, and an interview with the vice president, Frank A. Vanderlip, issued in Chicago, who formerly lived in which Mr. Vanderlip objected to the Aldrich bill, reached here today. It was said this combination between the City National bank and the Chicago bankers would probably be more of an aid than a hindrance to the Aldrich bill, and some plain remarks are being made about Chicago banking and the method used to force the scheme of an asset currency on Congress.

It was called to mind that one of the chief criticisms of the Aldrich bill made by Mr. Vanderlip was that the currency commission of the American Bankers' association was that the Chicago banks did not have the sort of securities, such as state, municipal, county and railroad bonds, which it is proposed under the Aldrich bill to make the basis of an emergency currency.

An examination of the banking reports for December shows that the Chicago banks held then of bonds, other than government bonds, and were using them to secure deposits, amounting to $19,000,000, and held otherwise sufficient bonds other than government to make the total holdings of these bonds in Chicago $27,000,000.

HAD BIG OUTSIDE DEPOSITS.

It is also shown by the report of the Chicago banks for December that they had on deposit in other national banks $41,400,000. This is understood at the treasury to mean that these Chicago banks are complaining that the Aldrich bill discriminates in favor of New York banks actually had out at interest in the hands of New York banks that great sum, though their money and they promise other interesting reports for December shows that the Chicago banks held then of bonds, other than government bonds, and were using them to secure deposits, amounting to $19,000,000, and held otherwise sufficient bonds other than government to make the total holdings of these bonds in Chicago $27,000,000.

PROMISE NEW REVELATIONS.

It is evident that the friends of the Aldrich bill know what they are talking about, and they promise other interesting revelations in connection with the methods of the banks who are persisting in passing an asset currency bill or preventing any other legislation. One statement made today is that when the Aldrich bill is passed, the friends of the bill will reveal the fact that the Aldrich bill discriminates in favor of New York banks actually had out at interest in the hands of New York banks that great sum, though their money and they promise other interesting reports for December shows that the Chicago banks held then of bonds, other than government bonds, and were using them to secure deposits, amounting to $19,000,000, and held otherwise sufficient bonds other than government to make the total holdings of these bonds in Chicago $27,000,000.

CONSIDER CURRENCY NOTES.

At the meeting of the senate committee on finance held today the question of the distribution of the currency notes provided for in the Aldrich bill was under consideration. While it has not been determined that the suggestion that the amount of notes authorized in the bill will be distributed according to the number of the population of the various states, it is being discussed. They are based upon geographical divisions of the United States into districts.

One plan contemplates a distribution of additional circulation to be taken out according to population, and another its apportionment according to the number of the population of the various states, it is being discussed. They are based upon geographical divisions of the United States into districts.

ENFORCE CURFEW LAW.

Juvenile Court Officers Making Night Raids on Cheap Theaters.

Curfew is to be a matter of fact and the ordinance regarding it enforced to the letter. The officers of the juvenile court have already started out on such a course and on the last two evenings visited several cheap theaters and other places of amusement to make arrests. In several electric theaters they found small boys and girls out after 9 o'clock. The first night 43 boys and girls were ordered to appear in the juvenile court and yesterday all but two responded to the summons. The two absent ones were brought into court later by a probation officer. The second raid rounded up over 40 boys and no girls and they have been instructed to appear today in court. The court's action in this matter, considering it is the first offense of the boys and girls, will probably be to give them a thorough explanation of the curfew law and to warn them that in the future violations will be punished. The court is also taking up the matter of contributory delinquency on the part of the proprietors and is furnishing them with a copy of the law.

POSERS FOR THE MAYOR.

Principal Points Hurl a Few Interrogations at J. S. Bransford.

Principal E. G. Nourse of the Ogden high school, evidently believes Mayor John S. Bransford gifted with supernatural powers of no mean degree. He has written him asking that the mayor answer the following questions:

First—Is the worst of the financial panic over?

Second—Does Utah suffer more or less than other sections?

Third—Any possible effects in the political complexion of the state in the coming national campaign?

Fourth—Has Salt Lake City found the problem of the unemployed serious enough to call for public works as a remedy, or is there prospect of such a contingency?

Fifth—Any personal comment or suggestion?

EDLER LOSES IN COURT.

Supreme Court Reporter Must Stay Marked Down from $800 to $600.

A. B. Edler must stand before the public as a supreme court reporter marked down from $800 to $600, according to the decision reached by Judge M. L. Ritchie in the Third district court yesterday. Edler was before the court, with a writ of mandamus directed to the state auditor, to compel him to pay Edler $800 per year for his services. The writ has been denied. The question of the constitutionality of the law passed by the legislature, which involved and nullified Edler's decision is that the new law is within the constitution.

Edler's sorrow is the joy of other state officers, for several public servants had their pay raised by the same act which reduced Edler's.

CURIOUS RELIC.

Hans Jasperson Uncovers What He Believes to be Ancient Vase.

A very curious relic was recently unearthed at Goshen, Utah. While Hans Jasperson and his son Stephen of that place were engaged in digging a cellar, a small metal basket or jar was encountered a little less than two feet beneath the surface. The relic which was forwarded to the "News," is in the shape of a vase, about three and a half inches tall and curiously designed. Near the top are two handles, similar to those on certain sets of baskets.

The handles and from these downward are of a substance not easily determined. When chipped it has the appearance of lead, but is much harder than that metal. The exterior looks like woven wire work, but that which looks like wire is of no different material than the other, but simply stands out in relief. From the top of the vase, a brass pipe or tube, but which later had been moulded into the basket of softer material.

Hans Jasperson has owned the land upon which the find was made for upwards of 50 years, and how the object got there is beyond his comprehension. He says the article may have been the handiwork of Indians, per chance of very ancient date. The brass is so heavily tarnished that it requires scraping to reveal the metal beneath, and while the other portion is considerably corroded.
