The writer of the article says, seeing that almost certain failure now awaits the San Domingo apperation scheme, the Republican party, to insure the reelection of President Grant and the continued exclusion from power of the Democracy, will call upon the codatry to go to war with Great Britain, in hopof effecting the annexation to the U S. of the British North American provinces.

War at the present juncture between the United States and Great Britain Inot so very improbable, especially in the points now at issue between the two governments by aggravated, twistee and harangued upon by demagogues, for they are numerous and serious; authough a Joint High Commission, composed of representatives of the tw. powers is in session at Washington for the purpose of adjusting those differ ences amicably, it is assorted that the prospect of anccess is by no meanwhich neither party seems disposed to recede from the position if has assumed. If an affair of such trifling import as the division of a worthiess little island cause a locking of horns, such a contingency is far more likely to arise when the Alabama claims, Fenlan raids into ter. But should this matter be amicably adjusted, there really is very little probability that some other points at issue will be; for as a set off to the Alabama claims the British Government, it is said, intends to press a blil for damage done in Canada by the Fenlans, and for the destruction of property belonging to British subjects during the war of the rebellion, which will amount to as much, or more than the Alabama claims. Should this course be pursued by Great Britain, in the present temper of the American people, by no means war would be the only arbitrament of the questions at issue that would be of public peace and tranquility.

politicians, and that appeals to the passions of the people are to be made by demagogues to ensure the success of a plan in which such wholesale butchery is involved. It is to be hoped for the inte ests of humanity and eivilization that the programme as made known by our contemporary is without foundation; or, if founded in fact, that good sense and discretion will so far prevail

CONGRESS is just now busy legislating for the suppression of the Ku Klux and the restoration of law and order in the South,-matters, which from their serious import, are well deserving the attention of the national lawmakers; for at no period in the history of the nation has wise legislation been more beceasery than it is at the present time in the lately rebellious States. The conditions of things said now to exist there is worse than open rebellion or warfare; for in the latter case the malcontents could be reached and dealt with; but where men are bound together by oaths in secret leagues it is uest to impossible to reach them by egialation. This fact renders the peech of colored Congressman De Large, from the Charleston district, South Carolina, made in the House of Representatives on the s xth instant. on the subject of the Ku Klux very timely. Mr. De Large says that evils exist in the South, and that both parties, Republicans and Democrats, are responsible therefor, and that no legislation that may be adopted or resolved upon by Congress will be effectual for their suppression, without the removal of political disabilities.
