Boise, Idaho, to whom he gave his full support. Mr. Dern's paper on the mining industry of Utah was listened to with profound interest. There is perhaps no better posted man on the subject in the state and the resources of Utah from a mining standpoint were shown to compare well with those of any state in the Union. The Denver Post has the following to say regarding Mr. Dern: Ameng the really big men in the mining congress is John Dern of Salt Lake, president of the Consolidated Mercur, also of the Uncle Sam and other big properties. It is told of him that he spent big money in trying to that are dark and for tricks that are vain the mining investor has left Bret Harte's Heathen Chinee trailing in the rearward dust. Time was, perhaps, when the business of buying and selling mines was as free from guile as the that he spent big money in trying to make a copper mine of a property be owned. He bored tunnels, sunk buying and selling of sassafras. That time having passed, mine bartering has shafts and poured money in otherwise, But he failed to strike the ore body and finally someone happened by and absorbed some of the attributes of the horse trade. Now matters have reached such a pass that when a mine worth he sold the property for a song. The new owner went to work : pushed 10 feet further in one of buying is to be bought, the buyer who wishes to put on his competitors what pushed is ricking the biggest and rich-est body of copper ore discovered in that district. Mr. Dern soon heard about the strike. He threw up his hands and declared: Billy Baxter used to call the "triple kejinks" has to be shrewder than the serpent, sharper than a weasel, oilier hands and declared: "D--n it, so long as I live I shall never sell a mining claim or pros-pect I have worksd again; I will 'push 10 feet further.' If it costs my fortune." Mr. Dern went to Utah back in 1890 from Fremont, Neb. He organized a company and took over the Mercur. Uncle Sam and other mines. Eack in Negraska he was a politician, baying than an ambassador and able to shatter time and space in a 40,000-horsepower motor car. In proof of which, witness the maneuvers which attended the struggle for the Hailstone group of claims in the Fairview mining district,

The big chief of the first of these is George Wingtheld, Gold-field's original millionaire. He is an industrious and persevering person and has burrowed for gold in the Eagle like a ferret after rats. Among his other ate from Dodge county, also treasurer of that county two terms. He knew Bryan intimately in his early political Bryan intimately in his early political life, and they were fast friends. But out in Utah Mr. Dern has not been so active in politics as in Nebraska. He is "mining now," as he puts it. "A business administration of a mino is what brings the success," continued Mr. Dern. "Science does not figure much in the line. Mining is not an exact science: in my opinion. Prac-

He tunneled after it, got gladder and gladder, and then, just as the pursued value of ore nidesed exact science; in my opinion. Prac-tical experience is what counts. To do things successfully in any occupation one must have the hard-bought experience, not theory. There is a wide chasm between the two, but both just as the pursued vein of ore widened in the Eagle, but in the Eagle's Nest, discovery that he was no longer mining out to eight feet, he made the painful Bringing down the roof of his tunnel combined are a double accomplish

AMERICAN MINING CONGRESS.

Annual Session Now Over-"Departments of Mines" Seems Likely.

Gov. John C. Cutler re I med yesterday from the annual session of the American mining congress at Denver, Colo. The session is regarded as having been highly successful, and is likely to result in important legislation in many states. The mining industry was discussed in all its phases, and many excellent papers read. In speaking of the work of the con-gress, Gov. Cutler said yesterday: "The most far-reaching action tak-en by the congress, was a resolution favoring the establishment of a depart-ment of mines at Washington, D. C.

JOHN DERN HOME.

President of Con. Mercur Returns from American Mining Congress.

John Dern, president of the Con-solidated Mercur returned to Salt Lake yesterday from Denver, Colo., where he was in attendance upon the annual session of the American Mining congress. Prior to a few days ago the belief was strong in local mining circles that John Dern was exceedingly likely to return president of the congress. It developed, however, that Mr. Dern had re such ambition, but was in favor of

Camp-bell has no time to annex a razor, a toothbrust or an alternate sock for what meant at least four day's trip, but be is not a Beau Brummel at an inopportune cri-sis. Mine managing and manicuring are frequently at logerheads. When Campbell reached the Eagle's Nest and took a good long look at the would carry on experiments which would be beneficial in milling, con-centrating and reducing ores, and would be an important factor in the development of mining districts. development of mining districts. "The bogus promoter of mining schemes was also discussed in the congress. A law was agreed upon which would stamp out all 'wildcat' schemes to 'get rich quick!' In its adoption the members voted to place an amendment to the mining laws of the various states covering this point. "The drahage of mines was another

A haw was framed by the congress for legislation requiring each mining district to have a well-defined drainage system. In order to do this immediately switched off to the north-west, and that after a catacornered crossing of the Eagle's Nest for about 400 feet it cut across the Hailstone for 500 feet it cut across the Hailstone for draimage system. 500 feet, traversing the Eagle's Nest again, further on. Then the telegraph wires began to work, and the gentlemen who guide the destines of the L. H. Sullivan Trust company got together in their most private office, and sat up, and took no-tice. Campbell received instructions to corral the owner of the Hallstone, J. W. Langley, the Tonopah broker, and either get an option on the Hailstone or never come back. Having a family in Goldfield, and being accustomed to play aces, Campbell got both broker and option into his automobile and started home. started home.

GETS NEWS OF STRIKE.

Meanwhile, however, Wingfield, not being wrapped in dreams, got wind of the Hailstone strike, and set out in quest of Langley himself. But Lang-ley, being under the wing of Campbell in the Sullivan automobile, was inac-cessible. Then the Sullivan car suf-fered a temporary breakdown at Dia-mondfield. Wingfield heard of it, and scurried to the scene of disaster as fast as an automobile could get him there from Goldfield. So he found Langley at last. And for two mortal hours, while Wild Bill tinkered with the works of his recalcitrant machine, Wingfield besonght Langley to recon-sider his bargain with Campbell—un-successfully. Meanwhile, however, Wingfield, not successfully.

(Special to the "News.") Provo, Oct. 22.—Donald Rawstron, agent of the American Asphaltum & Rubber company of Chicago, who has secured a number of asphaltum claims for his company near Tucker is pre-paring to ship rock asphaltum, and is advertising for teams to have the ma-terial from the mines to the railroad successfully. Langley reached the offices of the Sullivan Trust company at 8 o'clok in the evening. Two minutes later he had sold the Hailstone to that corpora-tion for $125.000. And when the last pen-scratch had been made and the deed had been done beyond recall. Langley said huskily: "I suppose I'm doing right to sell that mine.but I've got a hunch that I'm practically giving it away. After ten years of looking for something that would pan out, though, a man loses his nerve a little. This bunch of money looks—well, it looks like a bird in the hand, that's all. I suppose you fel-lows will make it look like a bad cent in the mint." a the mint." And while Wingfield was on his way back to Goldfield, the thousand tongues of rumor had tattled to the world the tale of the latest Sullivan luck. Wherefore, and thus, it fel out that orders were received next day in the Su-livan shop for 600,000 more shares of Eagle's Next than ever existed.
