CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, 21. — Consideration was resumed of the resolution submitted yesterday by Thurman to discharge the committee on privileges and elections from further consideration of the credentials of M. C. Butler as Senator from South Carolina.

Mitchell said he stated yesterday that the Kellogg case was taken up first because when the committee met there was a motion pending before the Senate to discharge the committee from consideration of the Eustis case. Thurman and Saulsbury had denied this statement. Mitchell then quoted from the record, showing that the motion to discharge the committee was made October 18th, and withdrawn after a lengthy discussion, on the 19th. The committee met on the 19th before the motion was withdrawn. The record sustained him. He defended the action of the elections committee, which had worked faithfully, and opposed the adoption of Thurman's resolution, as being a censure of the committee. He believed all these contested cases could be decided before the holidays.

Hill of the committee said he would vote for Thurman's resolution; he did not regard it as discourteous. He thought the committee should have considered the cases in the order of their date—Eustis, Butler, Spofford.

Hoar of the committee said it was because the vote on the Spofford-Kellogg case was nearly ready that an attempt was making to get the Butler case before the Senate first. He said it was inconsistent for democrats to oppose the scrutiny of the Eustis and Butler cases. He argued that there was a controversy in South Carolina cases.

Hoar's motion to table Thurman's motion was renewed, but he allowed Thurman to speak.

Conkling, however, got the floor and denounced as wonderful and unparliamentary this whole discussion in which the secrets of the committee were bruited about. Hoar had no right to withdraw his motion to allow Thurman to speak. He wanted the sense of the Senate promptly ascertained.

While the yeas and nays on Hoar's motion were about being taken Thurman moved an executive session, which was agreed to, 30 to 29.

The Senators, in announcing the pairs, stated that although this was a motion for an executive session, they regarded such motion as one of political significance, and therefore withheld their votes. When Hamlin announced that Blaine and Grover were paired, he said that both were absent from the city and probably would not be here this session. The only Senators who did not vote or were not paired were Patterson (S. C.). and Sharon.

While the doors were being closed, Allison, from the committee on finance, reported, with amendments, the House bill to authorize the free coinage of the standing silver dollar and to restore its legal tender character. Placed on the calendar. As soon as the Senate went into executive session, a motion to adjourn was agreed to without the transaction of any business.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, 21.—A bill was introduced by Gibson, authorizing the appointment of a commissioner to provide for the improvement of the Mississippi river.

The House then went into committee of the whole, Wright in the chair, on the deficiency appropriation bill.

Singleton, member of the appropriations committee, explained the provisions of the bill.

Foster called attention to the fact that this was the second deficiency bill brought before the House, the former one appropriating $2,500,000, the present $1,250,000. That was another illustration of the economy of the democratic House of last year.

Beebe (N. Y.)—Did not the naval deficiency grow out of the fact that the money appropriated at the last Congress had been misapplied by the executive officers?

Foster—Not at all. There is a great difference of opinion about that.

Singleton called attention to the fact that of $1,500,000 appropriated by the present bill, $680,000 was a re-appropriation.

Foster replied that was one of the tactics of the democratic party by which they hoped to deceive the country. Last year the democrats had stated that they had saved $80,000,000. The books were made up and showed a saving of less than $19,000,000. He thought that an item of $250,000 should have been inserted for the completion of a new State Department building. The bill was then read by clauses for amendment. The first paragraph was for the payment of the award of the Court of Claims to the amount of $894,015. The paragraph specified individual cases and amounts.

Garfield moved to strike out all of the paragraph except the total amount. It would seem as if the cases and amounts were specified; as if Congress were exercising revisory power over these judgments.

Singleton gave as the reason why the gross sum should not be appropriated, that there was an outstanding judgment in favor of the Union Pacific railway, which by agreement was not to be paid until a certain time, and if the gross sum were appropriated it might be paid.

Atkins spoke for the retention by Congress of its power to specify to whom the money appropriated should be paid.

The amendment was finally withdrawn.

An amendment by Yeates was agreed to, appropriating $17,500 for propagating and distributing shad and other fishes.

Waddell said of the item for postmasters' salaries, the committee would report a change of the present law by which postmasters are paid in proportion to the stamps they sell. He offered an amendment appropriating last year's surplus for star service, namely the carrying of mails by other than rail or steamers, to the same service for the current year. Agreed to.

Cox proposed an amendment for paying government employees who worked over eight hours.

Singleton and Blount opposed it, and it was rejected with only twenty-one votes for it.

Frye made an impassioned speech on the alleged discharge by the doorkeeper of crippled Union soldiers. He said when the President saw fit to take men who had been in the confederate service, who are democrats to-day, and put them in responsible positions of power, and when the republican party commended the President for so doing, it might possibly be that the doorkeeper should, in the interest of pacification, be allowed to discharge crippled Union soldiers and put confederate soldiers in their place.

Cabell asked if Frye thought the President had done wrong in forming his cabinet.

Frye—I do.

Kellinger (Pa.)—And so do I.

McMahon replied to Frye—This talk about disabled Union soldiers on the doorkeeper's roll amounted to this, that some members had got some of their favorites appointed. Are there no Union soldiers in the country but republicans? In his district the boot had been put on the other leg.

Conger—The other leg is buried.

McMahon continued, and intimated that place Union soldiers were but little represented throughout the country, this criticism of the doorkeeper was in poor taste.

Sparks denied that Confederates had displaced Unionists. Democratic Union soldiers had in a few cases displaced Union republican soldiers.

After a confused and noisy discussion, Foster offered a proposition that the disabled soldiers be retained. This was ruled out of order, and on appeal the ruling was sustained. The committee finally rose and reported the amendments.

A vote on the amendment appropriating $700,000 for star service, in mail contracts, was ordered taken by nays and yeas, and resulted yeas 108, nays 129. Attempts to dispose of the bill to-day met no encouragement, and as the North Carolina and Texas delegations were anxious to have the star service item reconsidered, the House adjourned without final action.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Eastern War News.

LONDON, 21.—A Roumanian official paper announces that the Roumanians captured Rahova this morning, after a three days' engagement. The Turks fled towards Lompolanka and Widdin, with the Roumanians in pursuit. Simultaneously with the capture of Rahova, a Roumanian division crossed the Danube opposite that town.

A special dispatch reports that the Roumanian batteries, yesterday, sunk a Turkish steamer above Kalafat.

There was heavy fighting on the Lom on Monday. A Turkish official dispatch claims that a strong Turkish force, making a reconnoisance, carried the Russian positions on the Mochka Heights, at Plergos and near Javanchiftlich, destroying at the first-named place seventy casemates filled with ammunition and provisions. The Russians lost 1,400 men. A Russian attack on Cadikoi was repulsed.

A Russian official dispatch claims that the Turks, after a stubborn engagement, lasting from 9 o'clock in the morning to 6 in the evening, were everywhere repulsed, but admits that the Russian outposts were temporarily driven in. Both accounts agree that the Turks, after severe fighting, temporarily occupied and burned Plerpos. The Russians state that so far 850 of their wounded have been brought in.

Suleiman Pasha has arrived at Rustchuck.

The Standard's Vienna special says, the commanders of Sistova, Simnitza, Bucharest and Jassy have received orders from the Russian headquarters to prepare all possible means of transport for wounded men.

The success at Kara has greatly encouraged the party at the Russian headquarters who favor a dashing style of operations similar to that adopted at the commencement of the war.
