

MISSIONARIES.

Those Elders who were called at the April Conference as missionaries and have not yet gone to their several fields of labor, are respectfully notified that Tuesday, May 2nd has been designated as the time of departure from Salt Lake City for the next company of missionaries.

FLOATING FRAGMENTS.

Children colored, ministers give their second and last performance tonight.

Captain Andrew Burt is still prostrated and suffering severely from rheumatism, at his residence in the 13th Ward.

John H. Freeman is still hiring men in this city to go to work on the Burlington, Col., extension of the Denver and South Park and Pacific R. R.

In a new advertisement Wm. Jennings and Sons announce that they will discount 20 per cent. on all purchases made in their underclothing department.

A late order instructs all Union Pacific engineers to cover their head lights while standing on a siding, with the drop curtain furnished for the purpose, and not to uncover them until they are ready to take the main track.

Salt Lake people will remember John Jerome Howson of Comic opera celebrity. He makes his appearance again in this city with the popular Comely-Barton Company at the Salt Lake Theatre May 15. They are engaged for four nights.

President A. O. Soot received a letter on Sunday last from Brother Bennett bearing the bad news of the death of Bishop H. P. Cook, of Cedar Valley, which occurred on Friday morning last. Bishop Cook had for some weeks previous been afflicted, it is supposed with heart disease. The letter stated that the funeral services were to be held on Saturday afternoon—Territorial Enquirer.

LOCAL AND OTHER MATTERS.

Prostrated.—Brother John Pack of the 17th Ward an old and well known citizen, is prostrated with a severe attack of illness. His condition is considered very critical.

The Phoenix.—To-morrow night the famous actor, Milton Noble, with a full company of dramatic artists will open at the Theatre with the "Phoenix," a deeply sensational play. The New York News speaks of it thus:

There is no common sagacity in the opportune introduction of the melodrama of "The Phoenix" as a cent to the pictorial and romantic "Eighty Day Tour" of the theatre, which is announced to succeed it. The atmosphere which surrounds "Phoenix" is a lurid one. It is sensational and somewhat tragic but it is not without compensating qualities that render it decidedly emotional, and at times, terrible in its sensations. It is one of the strongest and most original melodramas on the stage.

On Friday night "Interviews, or Bright Bohemia," will be performed.

Hurt on the Railroad.—John Cavanagh, a brakeman was brought down on No. 3 last evening in a mangled and senseless condition. It appears that early in the afternoon he was engaged, in the Cheyenne yard, in coupling an emigrant car to a caboose, and in some way managed to get right between them. He was caught right in the region of the bowels and squeezed into a space of somewhat less than five inches.

Larry Malloy, met with a rather serious accident last Friday, while getting off the cars at Medicine River. His foot slipped and though he lay on his feet he was considerably shaken up, and had one leg rather badly lacerated.

Charles Kelen, a wheel-tapper in the yard here, while doing some work with a pick, on Saturday last, stuck it into his foot, and is now laid up at the hospital.—Laramie Times, April 17th.

Constitutional Convention.—Today at the time agreed upon for adjournment, forty-nine of the seventy-two delegates were in their seats. President Smith called the Convention to order, prayer was offered by the Chaplain, and Mr. Windsor reported that the committee on printing had had the reports of the standing committees printed. Mr. Luther P. Tuttle, member elect of Sanpete County, was sworn in. Mr. Wells, of the committee on compilation reported that the committee were progressing with their labors but could not make a complete report for some three days. A running debate was indulged in at the time of adjourning. Some favored three, five, seven and eight days, and one member suggested an adjournment until the first Monday in May. The motion to adjourn until Tuesday, the 25th, at 3 p. m. was carried and the Convention adjourned.

The Accident to Mr. Nibley's Child.—Mr. C. W. Nibley, returned from Logan this morning, for the purpose of resuming his labors as a member of the Constitutional Convention. It will be remembered that he was called home suddenly on account of an accident to his little two-year-old son Joseph. The little fellow was holding a piece of wood while a four-year-old boy chopped it with an axe. Missing the stick the implement descended upon the child's left hand, cutting it almost clear through from and including the little finger, to the root of the thumb, the latter being the only digit that remained unsevered. The entire forward portion of the hand, except the little finger, hung by a frail attachment. The mother of the child did not faint, as some mothers would have done, but like a sensible and practical lady she seized the injured member, placed the nearly detached portion in its proper position and held it there for one hour until the surgeon arrived and applied the necessary stitches. The wound is healing and the little fellow is likely to retain the use of his hand, with the exception of the little finger, which being severed, was not found for some time after the accident.

Gaskell's Compendium of Forms.—This above is the title of a large, handsomely-bound quarto volume recently published by Professor G. A. Gaskell. As the title indicates it is a book of forms, but this does not convey to the mind an adequate idea of the scope of the work. It is pre-eminently a nineteenth century production, and especially adapted to the requirements of the business man, whose time is money.

We are living in a proverbially fast age, the age of stenography, steam and electricity, and notwithstanding the giant strides we are already making, we are not satisfied. The iron horse must be whipped into a sharper gait and the harnessed lightning bent under a double load, and be goaded around the world swifter than ever before, and still the cry is, "Faster."

If an engine can make a mile a minute, why can it not make two? If vessels now cross the Atlantic in seven days and a half, why can they not be loaded to the guns and driven over in six? This is the spirit of the age and the imperative demand is rapid work and consequently improved facilities. People have neither time nor inclination to wade through the musty volumes of antiquity in order to arrive at the vital facts of the present. The crisis arrives, and the question arises, What shall be done?

On a numerous and varied class of subjects having a direct bearing upon all the ordinary and most of the extraordinary crises incident to every-day life, from the hard practical facts of daily business to the elaborate and complicated forms of fashionable and parliamentary etiquette, you will find an explicit and comprehensive answer in Professor Gaskell's Compendium.

Many of the subjects are richly illustrated, and it contains comparatively elaborate treatises, combined with many pertinent and practical suggestions, upon the following subjects, viz: Penmanship, orthography, rhetoric, stenography, composition, elocution, oratory, book-keeping, forms for social and commercial correspondence, success in business, agriculture, the home and family life, social and parliamentary etiquette and English and American literature.

In pursuing its pages the reader encounters a constant succession of surprises in the diversity and multiplicity of its subjects and the evident depth and scope of the author's research, including as it does several different dictionaries and vocabularies, commercial forms, laws of business and scientific and mechanical tables too numerous to mention. Independently of its intrinsic value as a comprehensive work of reference, it embodies a large amount of suggestive, statistical, historical and other valuable information upon various subjects, and all so intelligently indexed by the author and compiler that reference to any feature of the work can be had in a moment, and when found the wonder is that so small a volume can cover so much of the subject without apparent crowding or confusion.

In fact it is not too much to say that Gaskell's Compendium of Forms is a small library bottled down to a volume in a parvo and next to a standard unabridged dictionary undoubtedly, one of the most comprehensive, and useful works of reference that has ever been published in America.

The edition just issued contains over 80 pages of new matter. Mr. R. M. Powers, of this city, is agent for the work, and he desires to obtain agents in all parts of the Territory, to whom he is prepared to give liberal terms.

We append the following communication in reference to the work:

UNIVERSITY OF DESERET, Salt Lake City, Utah, April 18, 1893.
Mr. R. M. Powers.
Dear Sir—We have found "Gaskell's Compendium of Forms" a most valuable book for easy and comprehensive reference. Containing as it does, so much useful information relative to social and business life, that is otherwise readily accessible only through an extensive and well-selected library, we deem it a valuable and economic compend, suited to every household and to every business office.

Yours truly,
J. W. PARK.

Accident at Franklyn.—Yesterday evening a freight train No. 4, due in this city at 5:25, was switching at Franklyn, the rails spread, causing the engine and tender to sink into the mud at one side. Mr. Frank Russell, a passenger, had stepped upon the platform of the engine, and the sinking process causing the engine and tender to come clear together, he was caught by the waist between the two and badly squeezed. He managed to jump from the engine in time to avoid further injury, and was able to walk to the caboose.

The recent melting of snow and heavy rains having saturated the road-bed, the engine sank to a considerable depth, carried down by its great weight of 45 tons, and the tender and a car of bullion were in about the same situation. Two engines—one to bring the passengers up and the other to help release the prostrate rolling stock—went south from this city accompanied by a large force of men, Supt. Sharp going also to direct the work. The engine having been released, the Superintendent returned at 8 a. m. today. The train was placed on the track and brought to the city today.

Mr. F. Russell, the young man who was injured, suffers considerably pain, but he is not considered to be seriously hurt. He is being attended by Dr. Benedict at his residence in the 13th Ward.

Died of His Injuries.—Thomas White, the man who was injured by an explosion at Jones' quarry a few days since, died at 10:30 a. m. today, at St. Mary's Hospital, where he received all the care and attention that could be given under the circumstances. His injuries were, however, of so fearful a character, that from the first it was not considered possible for him to survive.

Stuck in the Snow.—The Denver Tribune of Monday gives an account of the blockade of the Gigantean mine in the Weber Canyon, and as the narrative presents an odd mixture of the pathetic, ludicrous and perplexing, and has some local interest we herewith present it.

On Sunday the agent, at his hotel in Denver, received the following dispatch:

PULPIT ROCK, Utah.
Bruno Kennicott, American Hotel, Denver, Colorado:

We are stuck here, almost in sight of Devil Gate Falls, in snow bank. Chances are that we can not make Denver on time. Squeeze it with the newspaper boys, Billy Arlington, Lew Benedict and Frank Moran are shoveling like minks in an ice float with their old song and dance shoes.

Mr. Kennicott despatched his office, and rushing to the telegraph office, sent the following:

J. H. Surridge, Pulpit Rock, or car Conductor Union Pacific Train:
You must open here to-morrow night. Everything arranged. Don't mind cost. Leavitt will stand it. Denver. Dispatch Division Superintendent at Laramie City for special train—fast locomotive and car to take you through. Must open Monday if it takes longer.

It appears that Mr. Kennicott's dispatch was delayed, probably by the breaking of the wires by the storm. Not until nearly midnight did he receive an answer. Meanwhile had flitted around town frantically to ascertain if he could not obtain a relief train to go out to meet the delayed company. The return telegram was:

"Green River, April 16.
Bruno Kennicott:

Coming o. k. Late six hours, but making time. Boys all played out. Billy Arlington's hands frozen, and Lew Benedict's feet nipped badly. Doctor on train; will fix them all right. Telegraphed for special; no reply. Wired Omaha. Conductor has order to send her through.

Appreciating that the train could not put through, Mr. Kennicott sent another dispatch to Bitter Creek, ordering Surridge to again wire for a special; and he also telegraphed Bob Law at Laramie to send a special to meet the Leavitt company.

About 3 o'clock this morning Mr. Kennicott wearily staggered up five flights of stairs to the Western Union telegraph rooms, and for his effort was rewarded in the receipt of the following couplet:

Special met us. Coming on with plow-header at 50 miles an hour. Doctor confident that Arlington and Benedict will be ready for work. Run mighty rough on us. Every body awake and willing. No other chance. Bank on us. Just saw engineer. Says he will pull us through if he blows cylinder head out. J. H. Surridge.
Sent train and good driver. We will make the run or bust.

ROBERT LAW.
As the Tribune forms were being sent down the elevator, Mr. Kennicott walked into the editorial rooms as if he were just recovering from a paralytic shock, and gave the information that the special was beating the time of the famous Jarrett & Palmer trans continental train, and would arrive at the Union depot at 7 o'clock to-night—barring accidents.
