

CALENDAR, 1877.

Table with 7 columns (Sun. to Sat.) and 4 rows of dates for January 1877.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT To the Salt Lake Public!

GRAND HOLIDAY CENTENNIAL OPENING Christmas and New Year's Presents! Dwyer's Book Store this evening.

ELEGANTLY BOUND BOOKS in every style of binding. TOY BOOKS. WAX DOLLS, CHINA DOLLS.

WAGONS, WHEELBARROWS, SLEIGHS, CARTS, AND HOBBY HORSES, WORK BOXES, LADIES' WICKER WORK BASKETS, ALBUMS from 25c. up to $50.00.

HUNDREDS OF PRETTY THINGS. Suitable for Christmas Presents, too numerous to mention.

Handsome Writing Desks, Gold Pens and Holders. Having selected the stock while in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, with great care, I am determined to sell as low as any other house in the city.

All kinds of PRINTING executed in the Highest Style of the Art, at Bed Rock Prices, at the Deseret News Office.

"We are Bound to Win" CUSTOMERS AND CURRENCY! Low Prices and Fair and Square Dealing will do it.

For all the LATEST NOVELTIES in LADIES', MISSES and CHILDREN'S SHOES AND SLIPPERS, MEN'S, BOYS AND YOUTHS' BOOTS AND SHOES, HATS AND CAPS AND GLOVES.

Arctic Overshoes and Rubber Goods, FOR ONE AND ALL. Keep your Feet Warm and Dry. To do this and many other mentioned in above, the best place is at GEO. DUNFORD'S, Wholesale and Retail.

NEW BOOKS. A BOOK OF Four Hundred Pages. "CORRESPONDENCE" or "PALESTINE TOURISTS!"

Completing a collection of letters written by President Geo. A. Smith and members of his party while traveling in Europe, Asia and Africa.

JUST PUBLISHED. Morocco Clit, Embossed, $3.00. Morocco, Embossed, 2.50. Cloth, 2.00.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

Keep Them Before the Public.

F. Auerbach & Bro. Sell dry goods, fancy goods, millinery, clothing, hats and shoes, hats and caps, notions, etc.

Calder & Carless. Sell Mason's Hammer and other organs, pianos, fancy goods, holiday presents, and all kinds of musical instruments and more.

Dr. A. W. Calhoun. Practices in dentistry.

G. F. Calmer & Co. Sell family groceries, window glass, and home-made sashes.

Davis, Howe & Co. Do all kinds of millinery and sewing, making, repairing, and cleaning hats and bonnets, and all kinds of millinery work.

Day & Co. Sell dry goods, boots and shoes, hats and caps, family groceries, flour, feed and grain, and all kinds of hardware and general merchandise, and buy dried fruits.

Deseret National Bank. Does various banking business and receives various deposits.

Deseret Carriage and Wagon Co. (Walker, Knight, Ross and Obald) Make and repair all kinds of carriages, wagons, and carriages, mining cars, etc., and all kinds of blacksmithing and carriage painting and trimming.

Dinwiddie. Sells the very best live geese, geese, wauwau lumber furniture and baby wagons.

O. L. Eliason. Is a practical clock and watchmaker.

Geo. O. Ferguson. Does all kinds of watch and clock making, repairing and cleaning.

Jake Houser & Bro. (Successors to J. M. Houser), deal in guns, ammunition and fishing tackle, and do practical gunsmithing.

Davis James. Does anything in the tin, sheet iron and copper-smithing line, also in the gas-fitting line.

Lawson, Taylor & Co. Sell lumber, shingles, sash and doors, mouldings and frames, and everything in the building line.

James Keith. Sells all kinds of Washoe woolen mills, home-made cloth, and buy wool.

W. H. Miles. Makes brushes to order.

A. Rine. Does business as attorney and counsellor-at-law.

Morris & Evans. Deal in mantles and grates and fine stone work.

Morton & Tufts. Sell wines and liquors, wholesale and retail.

Howard Seabee. Sells the Best Wood Mower and Reaper, Faddock Sulky Buggy, Oliver Chilled Iron, Concord Sargins and carriages, horse, harrows, cultivators, wagon, timber, etc.

Sierra Nevada Lumber Association. Sells sash, mouldings, shingles, doors, blinds, lathe work, and water pipes, cheap, at wholesale and retail.

A. Gould. Is agent for the Red Canyon and Rock Springs Cattle Co.

Dr. G. W. Rhago. Treats all Chronic Diseases, office over Colebrook's store.

C. W. Stagner. Attorney and notary public, secures patents and conveys to investors, and gives information concerning the same.

Taylor & Cutler. Sell all kinds of general merchandise.

S. P. Tensell. Sells family groceries, hardware, summer prints, dress goods, general clothing, boots and shoes, ladies' shoes, children's shoes, and dry goods and merchandise generally.

By Telegraph.

THE WASHINGTON UNION TELEGRAPH LINE.

Last Night's Dispatches.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, 16.—Anthony submitted a resolution calling on the President to transmit to the Senate and Congress, with the United States diplomatic officers in Turkey, or any information about the Turkish revolution, agreed to.

Johnson submitted a resolution recognizing the Chamberlain government in South Carolina; referred to the elections committee.

Miles called up the President's message about the occupation of Petersburg. Johnson quoted from the Record, showing that Sherman had said Virginia, unlike other Southern States, was at peace.

Johnson held that this was true. The record had lived together harmoniously, and the President had no right to send troops there because there had been a street fight at the previous election. The Constitution never intended the army should be invoked merely to keep the peace, but that it should be used in concert with State authorities in suppressing domestic violence.

He explained how the negroes had been treated, and voted the republican ticket in Petersburg. Withers said it was of little consequence whether a few troops were or were not at Petersburg on election day. The great question was whether the executive department should be allowed to count the ballot by the army? If so, Congress has been wasting time counting the electoral vote. The military should be allowed to count the vote.

He condemned Tilden's loose interpretation of the law and the use of the military in State government, and his condemnation about the capital. Corruption, fraud and violence had preceded the downfall of other republics. We have had fraud and corruption, and who can say that the third party would be taken? Virginia had lived under a despotic government and could endure it. It was for the northern people to say whether they would consent to the change.

Why is it that this trouble to the act of 1853, authorizing the sending of troops to keep the peace at the polls?

Withers submitted a bill authorizing the President to inquire into and report whether the attorney general's interpretation of the laws touching the election franchise, of Sept. 7th, 1876, was correct; agreed to.

The Senate received consideration of the report of the committee on revising the rules governing the Senate, as agreed to in committee of the whole, and reported to the Senate.

Merrill presented a petition of Washington citizens asking the United States to purchase certain squares bordering on the capitol for the purpose of completing the original plan of enlarging the capitol, and that the million and a half to be refunded by the Centennial commission be appropriated for such purchase and adornment.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, 16.—The resolution allowing the elections committee to send for papers, etc., and sit during the sessions of the House, was adopted—149 yeas, 70 nays.

Lynde, from the judiciary committee, reported the refusal of the Louisiana returning board to produce certain papers before the House committee, and concluded with a resolution directing the sergeant-at-large to bring them before the bar of the House.

Frye, of the committee, said no republican was present when the report was agreed to. He regarded the doctrine enunciated as monstrous. Under it there was no sovereignty anywhere in the world, but that the House committee and compelled to produce its original records. Congress had no more to do with the matter than as an individual had. Congress had no more right to bring those original papers from Louisiana than the authorities of Louisiana had to take the United States papers to New Orleans. Had the United States papers been taken to Louisiana, they would have been converted by the defeat as to be ready to declare that a Congressional committee might carry away the archives of a State, and that a member of the investigating committee had advised putting in everything, letters, telegrams, etc., knowing perfectly well that there was nothing there which would indicate fraud in the election.

The committee believed the republicans had carried these States honestly, and that they would be counted for Hayes unless fraud intervened. (Laughter.)

Luttrell—I do not think that the gentleman has the right to charge the democratic party with fraud when his republican committee robbed the poor orphans and widows in the departments to carry on the campaign. (Loud applause in the galleries.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

By Telegraph.

THE WASHINGTON UNION TELEGRAPH LINE.

Last Night's Dispatches.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, 16.—Anthony submitted a resolution calling on the President to transmit to the Senate and Congress, with the United States diplomatic officers in Turkey, or any information about the Turkish revolution, agreed to.

Johnson submitted a resolution recognizing the Chamberlain government in South Carolina; referred to the elections committee.

Miles called up the President's message about the occupation of Petersburg. Johnson quoted from the Record, showing that Sherman had said Virginia, unlike other Southern States, was at peace.

Johnson held that this was true. The record had lived together harmoniously, and the President had no right to send troops there because there had been a street fight at the previous election. The Constitution never intended the army should be invoked merely to keep the peace, but that it should be used in concert with State authorities in suppressing domestic violence.

He explained how the negroes had been treated, and voted the republican ticket in Petersburg. Withers said it was of little consequence whether a few troops were or were not at Petersburg on election day. The great question was whether the executive department should be allowed to count the ballot by the army? If so, Congress has been wasting time counting the electoral vote. The military should be allowed to count the vote.

He condemned Tilden's loose interpretation of the law and the use of the military in State government, and his condemnation about the capital. Corruption, fraud and violence had preceded the downfall of other republics. We have had fraud and corruption, and who can say that the third party would be taken? Virginia had lived under a despotic government and could endure it. It was for the northern people to say whether they would consent to the change.

Why is it that this trouble to the act of 1853, authorizing the sending of troops to keep the peace at the polls?

Withers submitted a bill authorizing the President to inquire into and report whether the attorney general's interpretation of the laws touching the election franchise, of Sept. 7th, 1876, was correct; agreed to.

The Senate received consideration of the report of the committee on revising the rules governing the Senate, as agreed to in committee of the whole, and reported to the Senate.

Merrill presented a petition of Washington citizens asking the United States to purchase certain squares bordering on the capitol for the purpose of completing the original plan of enlarging the capitol, and that the million and a half to be refunded by the Centennial commission be appropriated for such purchase and adornment.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, 16.—The resolution allowing the elections committee to send for papers, etc., and sit during the sessions of the House, was adopted—149 yeas, 70 nays.

Lynde, from the judiciary committee, reported the refusal of the Louisiana returning board to produce certain papers before the House committee, and concluded with a resolution directing the sergeant-at-large to bring them before the bar of the House.

Frye, of the committee, said no republican was present when the report was agreed to. He regarded the doctrine enunciated as monstrous. Under it there was no sovereignty anywhere in the world, but that the House committee and compelled to produce its original records. Congress had no more to do with the matter than as an individual had. Congress had no more right to bring those original papers from Louisiana than the authorities of Louisiana had to take the United States papers to New Orleans. Had the United States papers been taken to Louisiana, they would have been converted by the defeat as to be ready to declare that a Congressional committee might carry away the archives of a State, and that a member of the investigating committee had advised putting in everything, letters, telegrams, etc., knowing perfectly well that there was nothing there which would indicate fraud in the election.

The committee believed the republicans had carried these States honestly, and that they would be counted for Hayes unless fraud intervened. (Laughter.)

Luttrell—I do not think that the gentleman has the right to charge the democratic party with fraud when his republican committee robbed the poor orphans and widows in the departments to carry on the campaign. (Loud applause in the galleries.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

By Telegraph.

THE WASHINGTON UNION TELEGRAPH LINE.

Last Night's Dispatches.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, 16.—Anthony submitted a resolution calling on the President to transmit to the Senate and Congress, with the United States diplomatic officers in Turkey, or any information about the Turkish revolution, agreed to.

Johnson submitted a resolution recognizing the Chamberlain government in South Carolina; referred to the elections committee.

Miles called up the President's message about the occupation of Petersburg. Johnson quoted from the Record, showing that Sherman had said Virginia, unlike other Southern States, was at peace.

Johnson held that this was true. The record had lived together harmoniously, and the President had no right to send troops there because there had been a street fight at the previous election. The Constitution never intended the army should be invoked merely to keep the peace, but that it should be used in concert with State authorities in suppressing domestic violence.

He explained how the negroes had been treated, and voted the republican ticket in Petersburg. Withers said it was of little consequence whether a few troops were or were not at Petersburg on election day. The great question was whether the executive department should be allowed to count the ballot by the army? If so, Congress has been wasting time counting the electoral vote. The military should be allowed to count the vote.

He condemned Tilden's loose interpretation of the law and the use of the military in State government, and his condemnation about the capital. Corruption, fraud and violence had preceded the downfall of other republics. We have had fraud and corruption, and who can say that the third party would be taken? Virginia had lived under a despotic government and could endure it. It was for the northern people to say whether they would consent to the change.

Why is it that this trouble to the act of 1853, authorizing the sending of troops to keep the peace at the polls?

Withers submitted a bill authorizing the President to inquire into and report whether the attorney general's interpretation of the laws touching the election franchise, of Sept. 7th, 1876, was correct; agreed to.

The Senate received consideration of the report of the committee on revising the rules governing the Senate, as agreed to in committee of the whole, and reported to the Senate.

Merrill presented a petition of Washington citizens asking the United States to purchase certain squares bordering on the capitol for the purpose of completing the original plan of enlarging the capitol, and that the million and a half to be refunded by the Centennial commission be appropriated for such purchase and adornment.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, 16.—The resolution allowing the elections committee to send for papers, etc., and sit during the sessions of the House, was adopted—149 yeas, 70 nays.

Lynde, from the judiciary committee, reported the refusal of the Louisiana returning board to produce certain papers before the House committee, and concluded with a resolution directing the sergeant-at-large to bring them before the bar of the House.

Frye, of the committee, said no republican was present when the report was agreed to. He regarded the doctrine enunciated as monstrous. Under it there was no sovereignty anywhere in the world, but that the House committee and compelled to produce its original records. Congress had no more to do with the matter than as an individual had. Congress had no more right to bring those original papers from Louisiana than the authorities of Louisiana had to take the United States papers to New Orleans. Had the United States papers been taken to Louisiana, they would have been converted by the defeat as to be ready to declare that a Congressional committee might carry away the archives of a State, and that a member of the investigating committee had advised putting in everything, letters, telegrams, etc., knowing perfectly well that there was nothing there which would indicate fraud in the election.

The committee believed the republicans had carried these States honestly, and that they would be counted for Hayes unless fraud intervened. (Laughter.)

Luttrell—I do not think that the gentleman has the right to charge the democratic party with fraud when his republican committee robbed the poor orphans and widows in the departments to carry on the campaign. (Loud applause in the galleries.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

By Telegraph.

THE WASHINGTON UNION TELEGRAPH LINE.

Last Night's Dispatches.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, 16.—Anthony submitted a resolution calling on the President to transmit to the Senate and Congress, with the United States diplomatic officers in Turkey, or any information about the Turkish revolution, agreed to.

Johnson submitted a resolution recognizing the Chamberlain government in South Carolina; referred to the elections committee.

Miles called up the President's message about the occupation of Petersburg. Johnson quoted from the Record, showing that Sherman had said Virginia, unlike other Southern States, was at peace.

Johnson held that this was true. The record had lived together harmoniously, and the President had no right to send troops there because there had been a street fight at the previous election. The Constitution never intended the army should be invoked merely to keep the peace, but that it should be used in concert with State authorities in suppressing domestic violence.

He explained how the negroes had been treated, and voted the republican ticket in Petersburg. Withers said it was of little consequence whether a few troops were or were not at Petersburg on election day. The great question was whether the executive department should be allowed to count the ballot by the army? If so, Congress has been wasting time counting the electoral vote. The military should be allowed to count the vote.

He condemned Tilden's loose interpretation of the law and the use of the military in State government, and his condemnation about the capital. Corruption, fraud and violence had preceded the downfall of other republics. We have had fraud and corruption, and who can say that the third party would be taken? Virginia had lived under a despotic government and could endure it. It was for the northern people to say whether they would consent to the change.

Why is it that this trouble to the act of 1853, authorizing the sending of troops to keep the peace at the polls?

Withers submitted a bill authorizing the President to inquire into and report whether the attorney general's interpretation of the laws touching the election franchise, of Sept. 7th, 1876, was correct; agreed to.

The Senate received consideration of the report of the committee on revising the rules governing the Senate, as agreed to in committee of the whole, and reported to the Senate.

Merrill presented a petition of Washington citizens asking the United States to purchase certain squares bordering on the capitol for the purpose of completing the original plan of enlarging the capitol, and that the million and a half to be refunded by the Centennial commission be appropriated for such purchase and adornment.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, 16.—The resolution allowing the elections committee to send for papers, etc., and sit during the sessions of the House, was adopted—149 yeas, 70 nays.

Lynde, from the judiciary committee, reported the refusal of the Louisiana returning board to produce certain papers before the House committee, and concluded with a resolution directing the sergeant-at-large to bring them before the bar of the House.

Frye, of the committee, said no republican was present when the report was agreed to. He regarded the doctrine enunciated as monstrous. Under it there was no sovereignty anywhere in the world, but that the House committee and compelled to produce its original records. Congress had no more to do with the matter than as an individual had. Congress had no more right to bring those original papers from Louisiana than the authorities of Louisiana had to take the United States papers to New Orleans. Had the United States papers been taken to Louisiana, they would have been converted by the defeat as to be ready to declare that a Congressional committee might carry away the archives of a State, and that a member of the investigating committee had advised putting in everything, letters, telegrams, etc., knowing perfectly well that there was nothing there which would indicate fraud in the election.

The committee believed the republicans had carried these States honestly, and that they would be counted for Hayes unless fraud intervened. (Laughter.)

Luttrell—I do not think that the gentleman has the right to charge the democratic party with fraud when his republican committee robbed the poor orphans and widows in the departments to carry on the campaign. (Loud applause in the galleries.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were robbed of their money to pay for the support of the campaign. (Loud calls to order on the republican side.)

Frye—There is a committee of intelligent members of the House who do not know when I say that the gentleman from California is a liar, that he is a liar, that he would interfere with a democratic stump speech that would meet the approval of the galleries on that side.

Luttrell—Do you deny that this is so? You were on the national republican committee, and you know that the poor widows and orphans were