$40,000 Fire.

ST. LOUIS, 6.—J. H. Kaillemare's furniture establishment was burned; loss $40,000.

Additional Particulars of the Brooklyn Theatre Fire.

NEW YORK, 6.—At two o'clock 115 bodies had been recovered, and there are probably as many more wothin the ruins. Some persons assert that no one in the upper gallery of the theatre escaped. The last man that left the stairs before they fell says, behind him was a helpless, half suffocated crowd. On Washington Street a line of horses and wagons are ready to remove the bodies. Great crowds of persons gathered in the neighborhood of the Morgue to identify missing relatives and friends, and their lamentations are truly pitiful. It requires a force of police to keep them from crowding over each other. The actors themselves had great difficulty in effecting their escape. Going to the back of the stage their advance was cut off by the flames that played around the usual place of egress, and they struggled from beyond to burst open the doors. Miss Claxton and another lady, Mr. Mathews and another gentleman, succeeded in entering the dark underground passageway to the box office, and saved themselves with difficulty. Stuart Campbell, a short hand reporter on the Commercial Advertiser, is among the victims; also police officer Patrick Keon.

2.40 p. m.—Up to this hour 130 bodies have been removed, and others are still in the ruins.

Brooklyn, 5 p.m.

Two hundred bodies have been taken from the ruins of the Theatre. The ruins are still burning, making the work of removing the bodies very difficult. Flags are at half-mast throughout the city and the theatres are draped in mourning.

As the night approached two calcium lights were placed in position, and the work of removing the ghastly forms of the dead was continued. They were under the galleries, but no estimate could be made of the charred remains of the victims, who were taken out in front and rear of the theatre, and rapidly loaded in wagons. Still the pile of bodies in the cellar did not seem to diminish. Although the fire originated on the stage, the loss of life among the theatrical company was not extensive. Two lives were lost—two young men in the flower of their professional life, Harry S. Murdoch and Claude Burroughs. These two young men were playing respectively, Pierre the cripple, and Picard, the valet to the chevalier. At the moment when the fire was discovered Murdoch was before the curtain playing with Miss Kate Claxton. As soon as the panic occurred a general rush was made to escape, Murdoch and Burroughs ran to their dressing rooms to get clothes to wear in the street, their garments being very scanty in the play. Their dressing rooms were on the same side of the stage, and on the right wing, as viewed from the audience, and consequently furthest from the stage door; even that means of exit had been locked by the panic-stricken janitor. The dressing rooms were arranged in tiers, approached by a narrow stairway, which led up to the painter's bridge which spans the stage. Murdock's room was on the second tier and Burroughs' on the third. Before they emerged the staircase was one sheet of flame. So eagerly and so rapidly did the fire do its work, that all chance of retreat was cut off. The unfortunate men were driven back by the roaring flames, step by step, till supposing, in the agony of their peril, that by some chance a means of descent from the other side of the bridge might offer. They ascended the trembling structure. There they were last seen by J. H. Studley, a member of the company, who had left his dressing room a few seconds before them, and fought his way through the flames to a place of comparative safety, from which he was enabled to make his escape. Once on the bridge their position was hopeless. they could not descend by the way they came up. There was no other means of escape but to leap.

At half past ten this evening the bodies of the two men were dug from the ruins, and both were identified by the remnants of their dresses worn on the stage. Only the trunk of Murdock remained. There were 200 persons in the theatre [parquet?] five hundred in the galleries.

This evening, notwithstanding the popularity of "Miss Multon," the latest play at the Union Square Theatre, the proprietors ordered that the theatre be closed, and a placard, draped in mourning, placed at the entrance, stating that in consequence of the terrible disaster in Brooklyn there would be no performance this evening.

At a late hour to-night 285 bodies had been recovered.

Kate Claxton loses $10,000; Ida Vernon $8,000; Shook and Palmer, the lesses of the theatre, $30,000.

When the panic occurred on the main floor of the theatre, Thomas Rockford, chief usher of the establishment, was in the lobby. The performance was almost over, and he was about making arrangements for the departure of the audience. At the cries of fire he rushed into the auditorium, and taking in the terrible situation, endeavored to quiet the people about him. Seeing that they were too thoroughly alarmed he ran to the doors leading into Flood's Alley, which connects Johnson Street and Myrtle Avenue, and opened them so that the people might escape that way. This diverted many from seeking escape through the main entrance. All who were on the righthand side of the parquet and balcony escaped through these doors. The opening of the doors creating a tremendous draught, which so increased the flames that the players were compelled to abandon the stage and escape as best they might. They had remained there to the last, but seeing that it was now a question of life and death, they retreated. The flames shot out on all sides of the stage and enveloped the proscenium, and the smoke began pouring in volumes into the parquet. Studley and Murdoch were the last to leave. Probably not more than five minutes elapsed between the beginning of the panic and the complete envelopment of the stage and parquet in flames; by this time nearly all of those in the lower part of the house had escaped. The crowd from above came pouring down into the lobbies, which were soon densely crowded; the stairways choked up, and there seemed to be no way in which they could be relieved. Many succeeded in escaping by the regular means of egress to Washington Street, but that staircase was also soon crowded and escape by that way was next to impossible. The greater loss of life must have been among those in the family circle or top gallery. Those who happened to be seated near the doors succeeded in gaining the stairways and the lower part of the house, but there were many who got no further than the second floor, where they died. The flames made such rapid headway that the floors fell in before any assistance could reach them. The shrieks of the women, and the shouting and imprecations of the men, and pitiful cries of children were heard below. There was no human relief for them. It was a heartrending situation. To have human beings perish almost in sight of their fellows is something terrible beyond description.

The city authorities were in session to-day, to make arrangements for the interment, in Greenwood Cemetery, of the dead not identified.

The Times says fire marshal Kerdy, who has made an exhaustive examination of the circumstances attending the fire, is of the opinion that at least 350 persons perished in the flames.

TO CALIFORNIA.

We don't give this for un fait accomplis, but it is very strongly rumored that Cedar Rapids is to be the half-way station between Chicago and Council Bluffs.

If this is to be, and some experiments have been made to that end, we suppose it is on account of the superior condition of the road. A trip on the steel railed and well ballasted road, is not any more now, if as much, wear and, tear on the employes and machinery to a train, from Chicago to Cedar Rapids, 218 miles, as it was on the iron rails from Chicago to Clinton, 138 miles, in the olden time.

It is not necessary for us to say that the C. & N. W. R'y is a first-class road in every particular, that it rides as easy as sitting in a "rocking chair," that its coaches are parlors, that its employes are the most polite and affable gentlemen the traveling public can meet or will meet in a lifetime of travel—the esprit de corps of the employes, if we may so say, is at a high standard; we say we need not say this in a newspaper, it is self-evident to every traveler on the road. But in the future these are to be increased; we suppose the speed will be increased; if possible, the superb trains will be more superb: there is to be no train more complete, either for comfort or safety, leave the world's commercial metropolis for the GOLDEN GATE, THAN THE GREAT TRAINS ON THE CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY—THE ONLY COMPANY RUNNING OUT OF CHICAGO THAT HAS A ROAD SO RELIABLE THAT THEY ARE NOT AFRAID TO RUN AT ANY SPEED CAPABLE OF BEING ATTAINED BY ENGINES OF THE MOST IMPROVED CONSTRUCTION, RUN WITH THE HAND OF IRON NERVE, AND A HEAD OF BRAINS, WITHOUT ANY FEAR OF ACCIDENT OR INCONVENIENCE.

Every employe on the road feels a personal interest in the North-Western Railway; it's the "clipper" road in the West, and so far as anything he can do it will continue so to be.

THIS IS THE TRANS-CONTINENTAL LINK FROM THE GREAT LAKES TO THE GREAT MISSOURI RIVER.

The old time traveler speaks in high glee of the "ease and comfort" of these days of steel in contrast with the pioneer days of this pioneer road in the days of iron. The comforts of travel on the North-Western Railway are in every traveler's mouth from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It must be a proud compliment to the efficient management, and that is the reason every officer or employe feels so happy and obliging.

It is with pride we mention these things, and join the general shout along the line, Hurrah for the "OLD RELIABLE."—Cedar Rapids Republican, Aug. 14, 1876.
