board a yacht al Cowes as the guest of a rich American. During the whole senson her own hospitalities amounted to two amail dinner parties of 25 people each. They were given two nights in succession in order that the same floring decorations might do for both. Her royal highness also discovered that by engaging extra service for two nights instead of one she got it at a cheaper rate. There is a well known and immensely popular Server Highness, one of the smartest bachelors in town, whose in-vitations come by the score and who has not and welcomed everywhere, yet has never given even a cup of ten to his frinds. MUST PARTAT THE GOUDA." Mrs. Leslie Cotton, the American arti-ist who recently received a commission to paint a portrait of the king, has just been honored by an order to paint Queen Alexandra. His majesty was so pleased with his own portrait, though unfnished, that he has written Mrs. Leslie Cotton to hold herself in readi-ness to come to Sandringham in the late autumn fo execute her majesty's pleased.

It is to Mrs. Hall Walker, who is a great friend of King Fdward that Mrs. Leslie Cotton owes these handbomd commissions. The American artist was presented to the king at Marlenbad by this lady and as the king boasts "he never refuses a lady anything," he forthwith did as Mrs. Hall Walker sug-gested, ordered a picture from her clever protege. That Mrs. Leslie Cotton will have her hands full when sha is depicting Queen Alexandra goes without saying.

Her majesty is most fastionous and her portraits have to be altered again and again before she is pleased with them. Last year she sai to a well known miniaturist who has long been a great favorite in the royal family but the picture did not give satisfaction and though the artist tried again and again she could not win the queen's approval of her work. Much to her majesty's chagrin the miniature was reproduced in some of the society papers where-upon the painter received notice that she must "on no account" again have it published. The miniature in question made her majesty look years older than she appears in her photographs which are always carefully touched up. Need-less to say, this artist will never get another commission from the queen. LADY MARY. JEWELERS INCORPORATE. J. S. 1. Style 2. Quality 3. Price

I make it a point in buying clothing to satisfy the man who wants to be neatly though conservatively clothed. I have also to think of the man who prefers the extreme patterns. Both of them can be satisfied from the full stock I have. In quality I am always guided by one thought; that is, the best possible value for the money. My prices are based on lines which will enable me to make a fair profit and yet give to the purchaser the best dollar's worth he can buy. You will notice my prices are only medium in their range. The quality of my goods can never be called less than superb.
