By the decree of roll-call death came to the efforts of those who would merge the University of Utah and the Agricultural college for the sake of making one big school with standing and prestige, and saving the outlay of money required to duplicate laboratories and equipment. The final vote stood: For consolidation — Bamberger, Bennton, Clegg, Hollingsworth, Lawrence, Lewis, Love, Park, Rasband, and Williams— 10; for an investigation commission— Barber, Callister, Gardner, Johnson, Larsen, Loose, McKay and Walton—8. Twelve votes are required to pass a constitutional amendment

Tweive votes are required to pass a constitutional amendment. As the vote was announced, the packed audience behind the railing arose and left, giving expression as the doors closed behind them of disap-pointment or joy, accordingly as they came from one or the other of the in-stitutions involved. "The consolidation is inevitable," said one of those who have worked hard-

The consolidation is inevitable, said one of those who have worked hard-est for it, and was nettled by the result of the vote. "Publicity and education of the people to an understanding of the real facts will make it appear the only logical course. It may take four or six, or eight years-but it is inevitıble.

Just why the amendment failed to pass was a subject of considerable dispass was a subject of considerable dis-cussion after the result was announced. Senators Gardner, Loose and Callister, transferred their support from the movement overnight, it is understood, on account of the action of those supporting the plan, in refusing to vote for Caleb Tanner's confirmation as state engineer.

for Caleb Tanner's confirmation as state engineer. The debate opened at the afternoon session' yesterday by Califster, until then a supporter of the move. He arose and with a wealth of statistics and fig-ures, argued against, the amendment, confessing as he did so that the situa-tion in educational circles was wrong. but claiming that the amendment was a radical and summary way of treating the question. He thought the voters meeded education on the subject before being allowed to vote on it, despite the fact that it was a mistake to let things continue as they are. "Then you would continue that mis-take?" put in Williams. "No, I want the change made right away," Califster answered, but he did not change his vote.

Jehnson, who had announced himself as for the merger, then tried to get an amendment through preserving the identity of the Agricultural college. On this failing he announced his intention to vote against the proposition. After the death of the constitutional are short their pay for February, due to the burning of a mail car on the Bal. imendment proposition, S. B. 150, pro-

AMUSEMENTS.

At the Grand theater last night "From Rags to Riches," a melo-drama, thrilling over with sensational episodes, opened before a good sized audience, and one that seemed to thoroughly en-Joy it.

There was nothing out of the con-ventional in melodramas to the play, yet Salt Lake seems to have an element that loves that sort of thing, however much it condemns other styles of plays "Ned the audence of all that is unopular. Despite the fact that the adventures of "Ned the newsboy" were never freed from the atmosphere of the ordinary, yet the audence was ready with hand-bromble.

kerchiefs, applause, and even cheers for the various crices in his career, "From Rags to Riches" appears again tonight, tomorrow night, and at a Saturday matings a Saturday matinee.

"Mother Goose" drew another cram-med audience at the Theater last night.

Eleventh Ward-A very pleasing entertainment was given last evening in the Eleventh ward assembly hall. It was under the auspices of the ward fin-ancial committee, and the success atwas under the anapices of the ward mi-ancial committee, and the success at-tending the affair reflects much credit upon the promoters as well as upon those who contributed to the enjoy-ment of the occasion. The opcretta "Little Red Riding Hood" was charm-ingly rendered by members of the Pri-mary association, under the direction of Mrs. Nellie Penrose Whitney. The presentation made a decided bit. The fantastic drill by a number of young ladies, led by Miss Maud May Bab-cock, elicited applause from the large audience present. The remainder of the program consisted of music, mon-ologues, etc., after which refreshments were served by a bevy of pretty girls. The entertainment will be repeated this evening, beginning at $:15. evening, beginning at $:15.

to report not later than July PS, 1905, was taken up and passed. From the speech of Senator Barber, it appears that the objection of Logan comes from that the objection of Logan comes from the fact that the action at this time is viewed as an aggrandisement move on the part of Salt Lake, and that if a commission decides the merger to be wise, then Cache valley will not feel robbed of its college by a sister city. A special session of the Legislature was proposed by Callister for the summer of 1906 to act on the report of the committee, should it recommend the submission of a constitutional amendment.
