THE COUNTRY HAS FOR YEARS BEEN deluged with what are called 'cheap soaps.' No more misleading title could be applied, as the soaps so-called ass heavily adulterated with all sorts of mineral substances, cheap yes, etc. The wants of good housekeepers, both as regards economy, dabor-saving, and the saving of valuable clothing are not for a cheap soap, but for a clothing, are not for a cheap map, but for a Good Soap for laundry use.

The undersigned offer to careful bouse-tkeepers and to those who consult true concerns, their now celebrated brand WHITE STAR'

'Soap. This article is in every respect strictly First-class, and actual use will prove it all the manufacturer claims for it. Namely: A Good, Honest Soap, suitable for heardry, bath room, etc. It will not injure clothing washed with it, it is easy on the hands and of great lasting quality. This brand is Yor said by all grocers throughout the United States. Try a cake of it and be convinced that it is all we claim for it. Besides the above, we have to offer the 'LAKESIDE,' 'OLD GERMAN,'

And shall be giad to send Samples of any o Yours truly, N. K. FAIRBANK & Co.

Frye continued his remarks in oppo-sition to the Vest amendment, saying the admission to American registry of ships bought abroad, would result in taking from American ships the coast-wise trade of the United States. All the old hulks in England will come here and take charge of our coastwise trade. The Senator from Missouri (Vest), Frye said, had not dared to (Vest), Frye said, had not dared to even propose a free ship amendment, pure and simple, but had sugar-coated it with an amendment providing for free materials. Who, he inquired, has asked for free materials? No ship builder had done so. There were in the United States 2,198 ship building establishments, employing 21,844 men, who receive annually in wages $12,713,-813. These establishments would be shut up under a free ship law. shut up under a free ship law.

Vest said the bill before the Senate was good enough as far as it went, but it did not go far enough. It did not reach the disease of which the merchant marine was dying. Neither had the speech of the Senator from Maine been a satisfactory presentation of the case of merchant marine. It had been empty "sound and fury." The argument of the senators, substantially, had been: "The high protective tariff is the greatest of all blessings, and must not be disturbed. High wages are the cause of the decline of American shipping, because they prevent us can shipping, because they prevent us from competing with other nations, therefore the American marine cannot be revived." Protective tariff, Vest contended, was producing discord, labor meetings and socialistic har-

McKinley gave notice at the conclusion of the general debate a motion would be made to strike out the enacting clause.

There is no occasion for talking committee reported against sending a There is no occasion for talking about choking off, replied Morrison, in answer to the question by Deuster. The Speaker stated up to the pre-ent time 43 gentlemen had addressed the committee. It was agreed that private business should be suspended to-morrow and the day devoted to tariff Morrison's limitation motion was greed to without division, and the Brumm spoke in advocacy of the pro-tective system, and in reply to the aruments of its opponents characterized orizontal reduction as horizontal humbug; a democratic great big no-thing; an incomprehensible, tattooed what-is-it, and free trade as murder

While the platform endorses Blaine, it does not absolutely instruct for him.

Taree of the four delegates at large are Clay made an argument in favor of a duction in the tariff, and indersed

Finerty made a strong speech against the bill. The word "free," he said, especially to Americans, carried with it a great charm. Remove that word from free trade, and the issue would lose half its potency. In days not long passed strong nations had not forced on the weak, the conditions of free trade, and the nation which had once been the armed protectionist of the globe, was now the home of a free trade ticket. She had forced opium, under free trade, upon the Chinese, just as under her protective system she destroyed the woolen factories of Ireland in the reign of William of Orange, because they interfered with the prosperity of Liverpool and Bristol. The gentleman from Ohio (Hurd) said the people were moving now. Addition people were moving now. Agitation had begun, and the culture and chivalry of the Democratic party would take the lead. He (Finerty) failed to see where the people were violently agitated over this question. The agitation (Chicago. was confined to a few politicians wh esired to make an issue for some bril ant enthusiasts who fancied they had found cause, and to some raphsodical theorists who seemed to think free trade was a democratic tradition. Great Britain by bribes and cannon had bullied China, beggared India and ruined Ireland, and now sought to gain control of American commerce by din-ners and banquets, and free trade was only strongly agitated by gentlemen, fumigated, perhaps, by the post-prandial odor of the Cobden club dinners. [Applause and laughter.] The advocates of free ships attributed to different causes the destruction of our merchant marine, but history confronted them with the fact history confronted them with the fact that England, the perjured apostle of negro emancipation, had, for a bribe of cotton, sustained the cause of slavery in the sececing States, with the hope placing the rich product of the South at her mercy. [Applause.] Now she desired to control the American markets and dominate the commerce of this continent, as she already did the commerce of the ocean. It would not do to dain the protective system with the cry of "war taxes." We had a large supplus, but our navy remained special agent John M.
