

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

The "News" Correspondent indulges in Some Ecstasies Over Maude Adams—How Unionians Spent Thanksgiving Day.

Special Correspondence.
New York, Dec. 1, 1901.

"The hills are her pretty thoughts, her shoulders are the May, her smiles are all forget-me-nots. The paths her gracious ways, the roses that do line it are her fancies walking round, the sweetly smiling lavender in which my lady's gowned."

"Phebe of the ringlets," the sweetest, faintest little girl in all New York! I do not care if the play is "thin waisted," if her leading man has "no magnetism," and falls far short of the "ideal lover." If all the male characters are not equal to the female roles; in fact, if all these are to be remembered, and many other things, there is no denying that Maude Adams is a genius. The uplifting of her magnetism would float a sinking ship—and her little ship is on the top-most wave, where it will rest as long as her wonderful personality guides it. "Quality Street" does not overwhelm one all at once; it's a play you can take home, and think about, reading this article little bit, and that winsome little piece of naturalism. It is all so genuine, so pathetic, that one may take it, as it were, in one's arms like a loving but selfish child, to caress and pet, notwithstanding its faults. This dear little idyll will be stored away in heart and memory, long after its impersonations have laid it aside for more ambitious roles.

Thanksgiving day was well observed among the members of the Latter-day Saints' branch here. Hon. John be nearer the "colony," and not feel they are out of the circle.

At the "Utah Tavern" Mrs. Laine and Mrs. Davis entertained in their gracious style. There were many Salt Lake residents present, also Elders Gill and Eastman; every one from Utah is welcome at their hospitable board.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Ferguson, with their family, took dinner at the Matthews residence, Riverside Drive, Mrs. Matthews being a sister of "Jimmie." It had always been the custom with the mother, who made her home with her daughter, and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Matthews, to observe this day religiously, having only her immediate family present. Although her gentle spirit passed to the great beyond a few months ago, her influence was felt by all that day. The writer being a personal friend of this grand woman, can well understand the sadness of her family, as they gathered on this memorable day, without her kindly presence.

President Burrows, who has been honorably released from his missionary labors here, leaves tomorrow for his old home in Texas, to visit his mother and relatives. He was the recipient of so many invitations to dine with his Brooklyn and Harlem friends and converts, on Thanksgiving day, it was hard to locate him, but at the home of Miss Shaffer he could have been found enjoying his turkey and other good things.

Perhaps the largest dinner given that day among our people here, was the one presided over by Mrs. R. C. Easton and Mrs. Melissa Searcy, at 50 Concord street, Brooklyn. On invitation of these two ladies, twenty people sat down to the table in the dining room of that well known old headquarters. Mrs. Easton and Mrs. Searcy, with the assistance of Miss Ruth Wilson and Miss Susie Deane, as their charming waitresses in white caps and muslin aprons, did the honors and gave the "brotherhood" a dinner long to be remembered by them. Those present were: Elders Neff, Porter, Clark Freeman, Cummings, Thomas, Farrer, Coulam Griffin, Neff

Old Coughs

New coughs are bad enough; old coughs are worse. They make you think of bronchitis or consumption. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cures consumption. Not all cases, but very many. Your doctor will explain this to you. Talk with him about it.

"My mother had consumption for many years and was given up to die. Then she tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and was completely cured."—D. P. Jolly, Ayova, N. Y.

Last night we saw the great Bruce Lane pantomime, "The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast." Naturally our interest centered in Prince Charming, Viola Pratt-Gillette, and she was a great surprise; the ease and grace with which she played, are perfect, and certainly one may be forgiven if mention is made of her faultless figure. She was the "Fairy Prince" of childhood recollection, beautiful from head to foot, dainty and lissome in all her movements, a very poem of motion. The play is so rich in scenic effects, and the humor of its three leading characters, Bulger, Ross and Cawthorne so overwhelming that all singing seems crowded out, and Mrs. Gillette has really put two solos, though in them, she shows the range of her fine contralto voice. It is the grandest spectacle of its kind ever seen in New York, and is booked for a long season here.

Bob Easton has gone on the Canadian tour with J. H. Stoddard's "Bonnie Brier Bush" company; he was given a handsome increase in salary to induce him to make the trip.

JANET.

ONE OF TEXAS' BIG RANCHES.

Texas is noted for the number and extent of its ranches. Of a total of several thousands, they vary in size from a few thousand to several million acres, the large ones averaging 50,000 acres. The greatest is the "X. L. T.," in the Panhandle, which embraces half a dozen counties and contains nearly 3,000,000 acres. It belongs to the "Capital Syndicate," a company of men who received this vast territory some twenty years ago in return for providing the magnificent state house at Austin. The ranch is divided into seven sections, each managed by a foreman, and each connected with the headquarters by means of telephones. The whole is run with the system and dispatch which characterizes all great industries.

On this ranch now run considerably over 100,000 head of cattle, and an idea of the size may be gained from the fact that the pasture fence extends 20 miles in one direction and 25 in another, making a total of about 5,000 square miles. From time to time small parcels of land have been sold, and meanwhile valuations have appreciated from 20 cents an acre to four times that amount.—Review of Reviews.

What a Tale It Tells.

If that mirror of yours shows a wretched, sallow complexion, a jaundiced look, moth patches and blotches on the skin, it's liver trouble; but Dr. King's New Life Pills regulate the liver, purify the blood, give clear skin, rosy cheeks, rich complexion. Only 25c at Z. C. M. I. Drug Dept.

Fears Over Mrs. McKinley.

When Dr. Rixey left Canton two months ago for Washington, says an eastern paper, it was with the understanding that he would not return to this city as the physician of Mrs. McKinley unless her condition should change for the worse. Her health, for her, was then about normal. That state has continued, and when her physicians are asked now as to her health they reply, in general, that she is doing very well.

While true, this is not all the truth. Physically Mrs. McKinley is about in the same condition she has been in for years, but there are features about her case that make her friends anxious for her. It is the period of Mrs. McKinley's mourning, and of course she would not be expected to go out much even if physically strong, but it is also the period of Mrs. McKinley's melancholy. It is with the latter feature that her friends are most anxious.

Except for short drives she remains at home in the little wooden house on North Market street, made famous by the pilgrimages of thousands of voters, who swore fealty to President McKinley in 1896 and again in 1900, and which has entertained many of the best known statesmen of the nation. To Mrs. McKinley life is but a void. She expressed to Dr. Macmaster, the pastor, and long friend of the McKinleys, shortly after the martyr President's funeral, a desire to die and join her husband. This desire is still present. She talks but little to her friends, but sits at home and spends much time in sorrowful thought of him who was her stay and comfort.

Mrs. McKinley is constantly attended by her sister, Mrs. Barber, who has given up her usual home duties and devotes all her time and energy to making life as pleasant as possible for Mrs. McKinley.

DAILY VISITS HIS TOMB.

On the day after the President was laid in the vault in Westtown cemetery, Mrs. McKinley was driven to the tomb, and was allowed to enter and to remain for a short time beside the casket containing her beloved dead. This visit was repeated on her next day, and she has since then been visiting the tomb, and to the family lot, where rest the ashes of her children.

Callers on Mrs. McKinley are but few, as she is so despondent that even her most intimate friends have failed to bring back any degree of cheer to her. Her pleasures, if she has any, are in the past.

Mrs. McKinley, the invalid, was an inspiration to her husband because she cheered him in ways that the world knows not of. Her body was weak, but her spirit and faith were strong. From the time that he started on a political career she was confident that he would some day be President. This faith she expressed to him and to her friends.

Perhaps at no place was the daily companionship of President and Mrs. McKinley more in evidence than in their Canton home. Some of the busiest hours of the President were spent here, but he was never too busy to give attention to his beloved wife. He would drop the most important matters of state or excuse himself from the most important caller if her condition at any time became such as to demand his presence.

In former years Mrs. McKinley loved music and frequently called on her friends to furnish it. She also delighted in little family social functions and in entertainments furnished her by friends. These desires have vanished.
