JUMPER FROCK IN A NEW STRIPED SUITING.

A charmingly simple but effective misses frock is this jumper dress developed in blue and white striped suiting. The skirt shows an over drapey trimmed at the edge with a band of dark blue taffeta, and the over-blower with its long shoulder line is similarly treated, though in this instance the silk is set under the striped fabric and apparently buttoned into place with blue silk covered buttons and false buttonholes of blue soutache. The cord and tassel lacing over the lace gimpes in front and in back are of green silk. Tiny green silk buttons and plings decorate the high-peaked collar and the cuffs of the all-over lace gimpes worn over a slip of white orkedo silk.

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

Special Correspondence.

NEW YORK, March 25.—The Easter "Life" that came out with its Mephistopheles page replete with Lenten suggestions, has for its double page another of artist Clyde Squire's popular drawings. In the "Choir Invisible," Mr. Squire has again given the public exhibition of his great talent, and equal to the "Old Love Song." The lady in the foreground will be easily recognized by her friends, as Miss Hazel Taylor of Provo, who is here studying voice culture, and whose face the artist took the liberty of using in his picture, though she is not, of course, in the choir in question. The subject is delicately and skillfully handled and will appeal to all classes. It is certainly another victory for Mr. Squire and the fact that he cannot keep pace with orders that come from the different magazines is proof of the place he occupies in the world of illustration.

Mr. and Mrs. John P. Meakin and their son, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Meakin, with other friends, were delightfully entertained at dinner at the home of President and Mrs. McQuarrie Thursday afternoon and evening. Music and conversation made up a very pleasant time for all invited. Sunday, the first, Mr. Merkin will give a monologues street chats with popular poets, and old time songs at the Bijou, on Broadway, the vaudeville house there. It is a trial venture and his many friends will wish to aid him with their good wishes.

The "Canadian Society" of New York gave a complimentary dinner to Sir Percy Sanderson, K. C. M. G., at the Hotel Astor, Friday evening. The banquet hall was crowded with leading members of the society. The menu was a most elaborate affair and the address and reply of Sir Percy were unique. Mr. R. C. Easton, who was a guest of President Bowles and Dr. Macpherson, was the soloist of the evening, singing English and Scotch songs to the delight of all present. Sir Percy personally complimented Mr. Easton, declaring his "Annie Laurie" and "Loch Lomond" were unsurpassed in quality of rendition.

At the First Church Scientist, Ninety-sixth street and Central Park west, Mr. D. Bickson, K. C. M. G., of Chicago, will lecture Monday evening. Mr. Young has been giving a series of lectures in the city, and is said to be the most popular speaker in the Scientist church. His magnetic personality is a great aid in the line of work he has chosen and he is held in high esteem by all who meet him.

Two young students of physical education at Spotswood, New Jersey, Messrs. Dell Boyer and Harold Wilkinson, the former from Springville and the latter from Cedar City, Utah, were interested spectators at Friday evening Mutual at mission headquarters. The two young men were escorted over to New York by Miss Hubert M. Hall of Mexico, also a student of the same school, and a regular attendant at church and the Mutual in New York. Both young men are fine physical post graduate students of philosophy and psychology of the university. The subject was "Comparative Statistics of Monogamous and Polygamous Students of Utah in the Eastern Schools." When Prof. Hickman first read the article to Prof. Cattell, it was received with greatest surprise by the professor and with almost a show of fear that it would be an unwelcome topic, but in every way it seemed to interest the "GREAT is self-denial! Life goes all to ravel and tatters where that enters not."

"Self-denial is indispensable to a strong character, and the loftiest kind thereof comes only of a religious spirit."

During the Lenten season, many deny themselves luxuries they are better off without; others, hard-worked and far from strong, will labor away at other hours, while there are those who devise original methods; all for the purpose of raising Easter money.

Surely the dispensing of charity is more commendable when that dispensation has been possible only through individual effort, and perhaps discomfort.

A number of the young ladies of Rowland Hall formulated a plan whereby they might earn some neat little sums for the Easter contribution box. Attractively illustrated advertisements announced that certain ones would be pleased to do mending for a modest amount. Beds made at one cent each, shoes polished at three cents per pair; rubbers washed at three cents per pair; wraps and dresses brushed, errands run, shampooing, etc., for a very tiny sum.

Of course, everything on the list is patronized by the teachers. Offerings thus earned are considered worth far more than the actual weight in gold.

Before the closing of the last week in Lent, the true story of a wonderful little boy must be told. A little boy who was both a saint and a hero, and without thought of praise, as taught by the Master when He said: "Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them."

A week or two ago, this little boy whom we will call Benny, by the faithful performance of certain tasks and duties mapped out by his father, earned a ticket to one of the shows being played in the Salt Lake theater.

Setting out eagerly and with his little face glowing in anticipation of his well earned treat, he arrived some time before the doors were opened. It was while he was marching up and down impatiently, with his precious bit of ticket clutched tightly in his little fist, just as it got away, that he ran into another little boy about his own age, who was standing on the curb with his back to the theater, and weeping bitterly. Benny instantly concerned, stepped up to the little chap and asked the cause of his tears.

"I've got to go to the show an' now I can't," sobbed the child.

"Why can't you, now?" asked Benny.

"Cuz I had some tickets to sell, an' I sold 'em all, an' now I can't go."

"Can't you sell that? Come on, let's rustle up somebody; we've got lots of time."

"I just one," wailed the little fellow.

"Benny was silent, and Benny looked very much troubled. Benny was passing through a mighty struggle with self. By and by, however, he pulled himself together and said:

"Well, stop your crying; I'll help you find your ticket."

All happened in a twinkling. The little fellow suddenly turned his back, and it was then, that Benny purposely dropped his treasured ticket on the sidewalk, and said:

"Here's your ticket; guess you didn't look far, did you?"

The tear-stained countenance of the unfortunate one broke into instant smiles, and as he snatched up the ticket, and darted through the crowd, Benny turned and went home.

Preaching, pulpit, priest, had produced no such sacrifice as this in Benny. It was here in the heart of an orphan, relating his story, was sympathy as to his loss showered upon him? No. His parents commended him for his generosity, and as he snatched up the ticket, and darted through the crowd, Benny turned and went home.

Columbia man, and at the finish Mr. Hickman was asked to read it to the post graduate class. From one and all the Utah professor has been showered with compliments on his subject, and the way he handled it. That it was done in a masterly way all acknowledge, and the professor is now considering several offers from leading magazines for its publication.

Pale priestesses at the altar, thou fairest child of heaven,
Embodiment of gentleness and love—Come ye from a temple of things unseen and holy,
With sermons softly sent us from above?

O golden heart outpouring in perfume, praise and passion,
And whispering your messages divine—Ye still the soul outreaching with hopes and joys immortal;
Ye still its pain before your sacred shrine.

O star from out the silence, ye sweetest service render;
In floating incense sweet communion give; Distilled from dew of heaven, ye breath of love triumphant;
Confirming by your presence, God doth live!
