"Parole," at Epsom, to-day, won the great metropolitan stakes. "Castlereagh" was the only other entry that faced the starter.

In consequence of the victory of "Parole," yesterday, he carried, to-day, ten pounds extra. Just previous to the race, yesterday, "Elf King" was very much fancied, and the dislike to "Parole" was so general that he declined four to one against him, but winning so handsomely, he became a strong favorite at six to four, for the great metropolitan stakes. Lorriland had to back his horse for the city and suburban handicap prior to his Newmarket victory, and as a result won something over twenty thousand pounds. The general satisfaction at the victory of the Plucky American, yesterday, was fully proved by the volleying rounds of cheers which accompanied "Parole's" return to the enclosure. "Parole," it is conceded, won on his merits, without getting anything approaching an advantage at the start or turns in the course. It had been freely rumored at Epsom, this morning, that "Parole" would not run to-day.

AN OPEN LETTER.

When duty and pleasure unite, we feel happy, as I do at this moment in offering the gratitude of my heart to my friends, whose name is Legion, for their prompt and unbounded liberality in patronizing my little pamphlet, "Women of the Scriptures," 2,000 copies of which have been sold, by the unsleeping exertions of my friends in about seven months. The printing cost me 60 dollars, which I paid in a little over two months. A favorite axiom of one of our home missionaries is, "action tells the tale!" and my friends have demonstrated it to a charm. Mrs. E. B. Wells heading the list, and this written where every day I turn the leaf to read it.

Possessed of Devils.

In a little village away up in the province of Udine, on the borders of Italia Irredenta, there is a great alarm and commotion; for the young girls of the place, one after another, are showing outward and visible signs of being possessed by a devil. According to all accounts, there are now about 30 young women in this unhappy condition. Why the evil one should have selected so obscure a village for his operations does not seem quite clear. Indeed the blame is not laid on him, but on the priests. Inquiries made by the authorities have elicited the fact that in Lent last year a series of discourses was delivered by the priest, in which he described at great length and with much detail the pains of hell, thereby terrifying weak young women that they were already lost and that the devil had entered into them. The priests, who at first were rather pleased with the impression their brother had made, have since found that though they had raised the spirit, they had no power to quell it again. Holy water had no effect, the most searching exorcisms fail, and even such practical measures as beating the person affected have been found useless.

While the fit of madness is on, the "possessed" crow like cocks, or mew like cats, or bark and howl like dogs and wolves. What is worse, they shock their neighbors by blasphemous and obscene language, being especially violent against the priests, cursing them for their inability to relieve their sufferings by casting out the devil. The prefect of the province has sent a commission to Verzegins, the name of the village, to see what can be done to stop the progress of this madness; for, by force of example and terror, it threatens to spread. The people of the district cannot be persuaded but that the devil is really at large among them.

His Ardor Cooled.

When P. T. Barnum was a young man, he paid attentions to a young lady in Newtown. The young lady's father conceived a singular and most violent dislike to the amiable embryotic showman. This necessitated extreme caution on the part of the lover. His ingress to the house was by a window on the second floor, which he reached by springing from the cover of a cistern curb, and catching hold of the window ledge. His egress was effected by hanging full length from the ledge, and then dropping to the cistern cover, a fall of about six inches. One Sunday he took with him on the visit a young man. They reached the place, the young lady saw the signal, opened the window, and the famous Barnum sprang up into bliss. The young man was to amuse himself about the village until the hour of departure. It doesn't seem possible that anybody could be so brutal, but that young man actually removed the cover of the cistern. P. T. finished his sparring, and backed out of the window the full length his hands would permit. Then he let go, and instantly shot from sight into a yawning abyss of darkness and rain water. It is not necessary to repeat what Mr. Barnum said, both when crawling out of the cistern and during the eight miles' walk home.
