Word from Pleasant Grove this afternoon brought the "News" the information that last evening Niels Poulson and his son, aged respectively 55 and 30 years, became engaged in a controversy over money matters, the same resulting in the father picking up a shovel and striking his son over the head with it, inflicting a bad wound near the ear. This enraged the boy to such an extent that he got hold of the same weapon, and, following his parent to the front porch of the house, he landed the old gentleman a similar blow, felling him to the ground and rendering him in a critical condition. The sympathy of the community appears to be with the son.

Nancy Holman, widow of the late John Holman of Pleasant Grove, who was badly burned several days ago while destroying rubbish near her premises, is now in a critical condition and doubts are entertained as to her recovery. Mrs. Holman is 65 years of age.

FROM SATURDAY'S DAILY APRIL 30.

Manti, Sanpete County.

April 29, 1898.

They have the war fever here, and have it bad. The patriotism of the people has assumed a solid shape, and no doubt the recruiting officer's visit here will not be in vain. On my arrival here a large sign was being carried about town reading, "Come out and see the boys in blue before they go to the front." Several members of company F, N. G. U., in uniform, were strolling about town, presenting quite a military appearance. In walking down Main street I came upon a company of small boys, about twenty in number, from 10 to 14 years of age, dressed in uniform, being drilled by Mr. Lacy, third sargent of company F, N. G. U., and the soldierly bearing of these boys, the precision of their movements, and the pride they manifested in their uniform of dark blue, exhibited a patriotism on the part of the boys and their parents that would be a pride to any community.

The boy captain, J. E. Works, and his lieutenants, E. Works and B. Tuttle, may be too young for active service in the present war, but with the growth of this military spirit the time may come when they will render the Union service that shall be of great value. But this was not the end of the military fire—for by special request the Manti Dramatic association appeared in the great military drama, The Confederate Spy, or on the Field of Honor. After all this, who may doubt that the people of Manti are up with the spirit of the times and ready for action—the defense of the Union and the freedom of Cuba from the Spanish misrule.

Among the most noticeable improvements here is the barn of Mr. Jens Mickleson. The vane of the same, representing the form of a horse, is some fifty-two feet from the floor, which is 40x55 feet, and when finished will be the finest barn in the city.

A. H. Felt's pavilion, erected last January, is 51x100 feet, with a seating capacity of 600 persons. Sixty-six thousand shingles were used on the roof. The drop curtain is an advertising sheet, Hewlett's Three Crown Baking Powder, the most prominent therein, while the "Desert News" announces itself as ready to minister the news of the day as a daily, semi-weekly or weekly. The performance of the military drama was very creditable for amateurs. Jennie Snow and Dr. E. T. Hosford of the hospital corps were "all right," as one of the boys in blue expressed it. By the way, the doctor has offered his services to the government as surgeon in the present war, and is anxious for the call.

The magnificent school house standing a little off the Main street, makes a splendid showing with its fine ornamental finish; but the meeting house with its unfinished tower and lack of cornice has the appearance of an old ruin rather than the grand pile of masonry it is, or would be if finished and adorned in accord with its massive proportions. It would then have an imposing appearance and add to the attractions which the many fine modern brick homes of Manti give to that city.

Appointments representing eighteen different states, geographically, and thirty-three localities in those states, have been certified to the secretary of the International Mining Congress. Ten governors of states have accepted the invitation to name delegates, and are expected to announce their nominations soon. The names registered at headquarters show the official appointments number 232 delegates already enrolled, while the gubernatorial appointees promised and yet to be sent in number 300 without counting the thirty who will be named very soon by Governor Wells to represent Utah, or the 150 counted upon to come from California.
